U. S. CONSUL IN PERIL

GRAVE FEARS FOR FATE OF OFFICIAL IN ZELAYA'S HANDS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.—The State Department to-day received a cablegram from U. S. Vice-Consul Caldera at Managua, Nicragua, indicating thet he is in great danger. A message was received direct from him. He states that on November 24, Managua was in a state of anarchy. He asked permission of President Zelaya to occupy the American legation so that he would be safer in case of possible vandalism. The cablegram does not state if the permission was granted.

It is the last news that has been received from Caldera, and his silence is regarded by the State Department as very ominous.

The State Department declined to say if any American naval expedition has started to his relief either from Port Limon, Costa Rica or Corinto.

Consul in Danger.

The dispatch from Caldera was dated five days ago. What has happened in the meantime is a sealed book to the State Department. That part of Consul Caldera's message which the department consented to make public is as follows:

On November 24 placards appeared on the walls of Managua favoring the revolution and denouncing President Zelaya. One of the other consuls had information that President Zelaya was prepared to escape by night. Anarchy may ensue. The Consul asked permission to occupy the legation premises as being more secure against possible vandalism.

The Vicksburg has arrived at Corinto. Much excitement prevails at Managua. The position of President Zelaya becomes precarious. The city of Leon is said to favor Irias for president.

There is little doubt that the taking of important and probably immediate steps are under consideration by the State and Navy Departments as a result of to-day's cablegram.

The State Department made public the following statement to-day:

Zelaya May Retire.

The Nicaraguan Congress will assemble on December 1, and there are rumors that President Zelaya will retire. No other Americans are thus far reported captured. The Consul is once more threatened by President Zelaya."

The State Department also gave out the following statement, containing information received from Bluefields:

"Groce and Cannon were a colonel and lieutenant-colonel of engineers respectively and both regularly enlisted in the revolutionary forces under the command of General Chamorro. The highest revolutionary leaders declare that Groce, acting in the line of the duty of these officers, was with an outpost of ten men beyond the camp of General Chamorro, and Cannon with two men had been sent beyond to survey a position. The outpost was surprised by the forces of General Toledo and both of them were captured.

"General Chamorro afterward learned from an officer of the Zelaya army that both had been put to death by order of President Zelaya, that Toledo refused to carry out the order and took them both to Port Castillo instead.

HIBBARD REFUSES TO QUIT, IN VIGOROUS REPLY TO SAUNDERS

In a reply to-day to the letter of Election Commissioner Charles R. Saunders, urging him to withdraw from the Mayoralty race, Mayor George A. Hibbard says that he has been persecuted for keeping his pledge of a non-partisan administration, that the autocratic methods of James J. Storrow on the School Board would prevent his election, that Storrow's candidacy was doomed at the start, and that, so far as the original Hibbard pledge not to be a candidate for re-election went, that was a suggestion from former Mayor Nathan Matthews, and that Mr. Matthews had told Hibbard he since regretted it. Mayor Hibbard's letter reads:

Pledges Not Kept.

Charles R. Saunders, Esq., 92 State street, Boston, Mass.:

My Dear Mr. Saunders—Your favor of yesterday was received by me after I had been informed that the article had appeared in the newspapers. Inasmuch as I suppose that was the program, I have no special comment to make. My answer is as follows:

Two years ago, at the urgent request of the Republican party, I accepted the nomination for Mayor, with the understanding that I should have my nomination without a contest, money enough for legitimate expenses of the campaign and the endorsement of the Good Government Association. I received none of these.

I asw nominated and gave my platform the next day. In that platform was a statement made at the suggestion of Ex-Mayor Nathan Matthews, that I should not be a candidate for re-election. He has since told me that he regretted that I accepted the suggestion.

I aws elected. Within a month of the time of my taking office I was subjected to personal criticism for keeping my pledge of a non-partisan administration. Later, it became mild abuse, still later, a torrent of abuse, and now it has become persecution.

Storrow "High-Handed."

You say I am not as available a candidate as Mr. Storrow for the reason that I, during my term of office, have made enemies. Very true. But if I should retire from this contest, Mr. Fitzgerald would surely be elected.

The high-handed and autocratic methods employed by Mr. Storrow when he aws chairman of the school committee would absolutely prevent his election.

Mr. Storrow's candidacy was doomed at the start by the unfortunate handling of it. His right is as absolute as that of any other citizen to be a candidate for Mayor, and on the adoption of Plan No. 2 he should at once have taken out papers and made his entry in full compliance with the spirit of the law, instead of waiting for a self-appointed committee, selected primarily for the sole purpose of nominating him, to tell the 600,000 odd people of Boston whom their candidate should be.

Duty to Make Fight.

I am informed that two other men were offered the support of the committee, but they both declined, having appreciated the hollowness of the tenders being made to them. During the agitation, I was informed by certain members of the committee that they doubted if Mr. Storrow could be elected.

In consequence I felt it my duty to maintain my candidacy, feeling sure that Mr. Storrow's loyalty to the city would compel his withdrawal.

As to your kindly suggestion that you feel I have been amply compensated for my labors by my salary of $10,000 a year, I suppose it is useless to attempt to reason out to you, one so imbued with a stern and statitical trend of thoughts, that there are some things in this world which mere money cannot compensate for.

I do not recognize my inability to secure the election even in the event of Mr. Storrow remaining in the fight.

Campaign Yet to Be Made.

It is well to remember that the cam- is yet to be made, and I have confidence enough in the people to feel that once the facts of my administration are set forth, that I can depend on the result.

The recent correspondence between Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Storrow over gift and split contracts, an issue of municipal administration entirely eliminated in my administration, has most certainly given me no fears as to my candidacy.

If Mr. Storrow's ambition is first to protect the city and his candidacy is merely incidental to that, he has the solution of the problem in his own hands.

I feel justified in the position which I have taken.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE A. HIBBARD.

Mrs. Glover's Brother Questioned at Inquest

TOBY LE BLANC

RESTRAINED BY COURT IN STOCK DEAL

Daniel J. Shea, a stock promoter residing in Dorchester, and E. S. Carpenter were to-day restrained by an injunction issued by Judge Richardson of the Superior Court from selling or disposing of a certificate of 200,000 shares of capital stock of the Gold Crest Mining Company. A subpoena returnable the first Monday in January was also issued.

John Andre declares in his bill which resulted in an injunction being issued, that Shea and Carpenter are conspiring to defraud him of the stock. Andre purchased the stock in 1907 when the company was formed. By agreement he allowed his certificate for the 200,000 shares to remain in the hands of the secretary, C. A. Bossemeyer, for one year. Carpenter succeeded Bossemeyer as secretary and Shea became president of the company. Andre declares that the name of the company was then changed to the Les Gold Crest Mining Company. Andre insists that they are still officers of the company, or if new officers have been installed, it is a scheme of Shea's to frustrate Andre's attempts to obtain his certificate.

According to the bill filed, Shea is the dominating figure in the company and Carpenter follows Shea's orders.

Despite repeated demands, Andre declares he has been unable to obtain his stock and alleges that the defendants have conspired to secrete the certificate.

Andre wants them ordered to turn over the stock, to pay any dividends or profits they have obtained from using the certificate, and sues for damages. The property is located at Bullfrog, Nev.

GIRLS WIN BIG STRIKE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The striking girl shirtwaist makers to-day forced 116 manufacturers to capitulate, and 15,000 of the young women went back to work on their own terms. Ten additional manufacturers, employing 2,200 girls, were expected to yield before night.

The leaders of the union to-day declared that it would be only a question of a short time before the 10,000 girls still on strike would also go back to work on the terms dictated by them. All the manufacturers are signing agreements embodying provisions for better wages, bette hours and better working conditions for a year.

ACCUSED OF 8 BREAKS IN DORCHESTER

By the arrest of Frederick Emeno, twenty-two years old, of No. 268 Bowdoin street, Dorchester, the police of the Field's Corner Station believe that they have solved the mysterious burglaries that have been committed in Dorchester during the past two months. Emeno, who was in the Dorchester District Court to-day, was charged with breaking and entering six dwelling houses and two automobile garages in Dorchester.

He waived examination and was held in $3,000 for the grand jury. Following a clew given by a pawnbroker, Special Officer Augusta of the Dorchester station worked on the case for the last month, and yesterday arrested Emeno.

These are the houses that Emeno is charged with breaking and entering:

Residence of Henry F. Smith, No. 22 Radford lane, Dorchester; $10 worth of clothing.

Heavy Loss in Colorado.

BROTHERS TRAIL GLOVER SLAYER

Declare Hattie Le Blanc Is Innocent and Claim to Have Clews That Will Lead to Arrest of Real Criminal.

It was learned to-day that the brothers of Clarence F. Glover are more than ever satisfied that the mystery of their brother's murder has not been cleared. From one who is in close touch with what they are doing these facts were learned this afternoon:

One brother and another relative who has been a detective are giving their whole time to the solution of the case.

They have discovered a clew which they believe will be developed within one or two days in a way that promises to fix the crime on the right person.

They are tracing a suspect day by day and hour by hour. This suspect has been traced for weeks up to Thursday, two days before the fatal shooting. The movements of the person on Friday and Saturday are being closely looked up.

Do Not Believe Girl Guilty.

They do not believe Hattie Le Blanc killed Glover, because she had no motive; because she would not have the courage; because she had no revolver; because she does not know anything about shooting a revolver; and because of facts that followed the shooting.

But they want the truth, no matter who is hit. They are not seeking revenge, but justice.

Toby Le Blanc, brother of the widow of the murdered man, who was locked up for refusing to answer questions at the inquest on Saturday, showed a willingness to tell all he knows to-day when he was questioned in the library of the Waltham court by Judge Enos T. Luce.

Question Toby Le Blanc.

The young man, who had been fretting about his imprisonment, was taken from the cell to the library at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He and Judge Luce and the officer were the only ones in the room. After about twenty minutes Judge Luce emerged from the room and said:

"I gues Toby wil tell al he knows now. I have just had a talk with him and he expressed a willingness to tell what he knows. I sent him back to his cell to think matters over and in a short time I shall have him back again.

"I will then ask him certain question. If he tells what he knows I will decide what action to take in the matters."

Judge Luce intimated that it would not be necessary for a representative of the District Attorney's office to be present while the questioning proceeded.

Question Over Lawyer.

It was later learned that the reason why Toby Le Blanc had refused to answer questions was because he believed he was not legally required to do so. When Judge Luce to-day asked him about the matter Le Blanc replied:

"Well, if you will allow me to have a lawyer and the lawyer advises me that I either have to answer the questions or go to jail, I'll answer the questions."

"I'll allow you counsel," replied Judge Luce.

Girl Gives New Version.

A third person was in the laundry when Glover was shot and killed, according to a statement attributed to the girl prisoner in the East Cambridge Jail.

Still persisting that she did not shoot Glover and at the same time declaring that she does not know who did, the girl has given this version of the tragedy, differing in an important respect from her first story as it was made public:

"While Mr. Glover and I were in the Waltham laundry that Saturday night we heard a noise as of someone approaching.

"Mr. Glover quickly extinguished the lights and tiptoeing with me to the window he assisted me out, holding my hand until I alighted on the ground.

"Immediately after that I heard the

COURT TAKES THE GOMPERS PLEA TO-DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—As soon as the United States Supreme Court met to-day, Ralston, Siddons & Ralston, attorneys for Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, formally applied for a writ of certiorari in the Bucks Stove and Range case, in which the defendants were sentenced to jail for contempt of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The petition asked that the Court issue a writ which would require the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to certify to the Supreme Court, for final determination, the appeal taken by the defendants against the Bucks Stove & Range Company. The petition recited the proceedings which culminated in the sentences for contempt handed down by Justice Wright of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Assertions are made in the brief that Justice Wright erred in judgment, as did the District Court of Appeals, in confirming the sentence, the decree violating the Constitution of the United States as "abridging freedom of speech and of the press."

The brief also attacks the decree in that "nothing was done by the defendants outside of their constitutional rights."

Claim Decree Void.

It is claimed also that the "decree was void in that it condemned the defendants for an act committed before the injunction became effective, also including acts occurring long after the date upon which a petition to require the defendants to show cause why they should be adjudged in contempt."

The petition cites that the judgment was "illegal and void and beyond the jurisdiction of the courts indulging in them."

The Supreme Court took the application under advisement and is to render a decision later, probably on Monday next.

Confers With Taft.

An important conference on labor matters was held at the White House to-day between President Taft and Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison, John Mitchell and James O'Connell, officials of the American Federation of Labor. The conference lasted two hours. It was stated after the meeting that the Bucks Stove and Range Company contempt case was not mentioned.

President Gompers after the conference declared that the issuance of injunctions as applied to personal rights was discussed with the President, and his attention was called to a plank in the Republican platform concerning the indiscriminate use of injunctions by the courts.

The Sherman anti-trust law in its application to labor organizations was also discussed, and the eight-hour law as applied to government work. Mr. Gompers asked the President that a larger appropriation be recommended to Congress for the enforcement of the child labor law in the District of Columbia. The employers' liability law was also considered. The President assured his callers that he would recommend legislation along these lines to Congress.

PICK 9 HARMON JURORS

The work of selecting the jury which is to decide the fate of James M. Harmon, nineteen-year-old son of Sergeant Harmon of the Somerville police, who went on trial for his life to-day charged with the murder of Maud Hartley, progressed rapidly following the opening of court.

Court did not open until 10:15 o'clock. Judges White and Fox arrived at that time. As soon as the indictment against Harmon had been read and District Attorney Higgins had made the customary motion that the trial proceed, the work of choosing the jurors commenced. The fifth man examined was the first to take a seat in the jury box. At noon six jurors had been the jury box.

Nine jurors had been chosen when noon recess was taken. They are:

Andrew F. Smith, of Natick, a shoemaker.

Edwin Walker, of Ashby, a mechanic.

James I. Bryden of Wayland, a farmer.

William E. Coolidge of Acton, a woodworker.

Louis J. Lahm of Carlisle, a farmer.

Fred C. Noyes of Ayer, a laborer.

James H. Vahey in Case.

Shortly after the opening of court it was announced that Attorney John P. Vahey, who was appointed as junior counsel for Harmon to assist his brother, Thomas P. Vahey, the senior counsel, had resigned. James H. Vahey was appointed in his place. Attorney Thomas Vahey will conduct the case at the start, but his brother, James H. Vahey, who was senior counsel for Tucker, will assume charge as the trial progresses.

The defendant, Harmon, has been given twenty-two peremptory challenges. As the work of selecting the jurors progressed the Vahey brothers were assisted by three detectives from a Boston agency who have secured the history of every one of the 133 talesmen summoned.

Before the jurors were questioned Judge White said "The defendant is charged

DISMISS TWO STEEL CASES

Judge Harris to-day dismissed two cases against two of the defendants in the steel cases now on trial—the American Bridge Company of New York and Edward B. Stearns, the company's Boston agent. Former District Attorney Hill, special prosecutor, fought hard against the order of dismissal, but the arguments of Choate and Hurlburt, counsel for the defendants prevailed. Of the thirty-three corporations and persons originally indicted and placed on trial in the conspiracy to rob the city on steel contracts, to-day's action leaves only fifteen defendants now on trial, the remainder having been dismissed. One defendants died before the cases came to trial. Arguments of lawyers on both sides were resumed this afternoon in the cases.

OFFERS TEST FOR RUSSELL CASE LETTERS

Dr. Albert E. Hamilton, United States Government expert on handwriting and inks, continued his testimony at the Russell will hearing to-day. He caused a sensation when he announced that he was willing to hold a demonstration with chloroform to show that certain handwriting on letters in the case overlapped the cancellation stamp, and proving that the cancellation stamp was put on the envelope first and the address afterward.

Dr. Hamilton testified last week that many of the letters referred to were forgeries. The letters were introduced in the case by lawyers for William C. Russell, who have striven to prove that Daniel Blake Russell was really James Delbert Ruseau and therefore an impostor in his claim to half of the $500,000 Daniel Russell estate as the long lost son.

Members of the Ruseau family on the witness stand said that the letters were in the handwriting of James Ruseau. Experts employed by William C. Russell declared that the handwriting was identical with that of Daniel Blake Russell.

Dr. Hamilton made his declaration when shown an envelope addressed to Joseph Ruseau, Helena, New York. It was written with a blue pencil.

"Certain letters overlap the cancellation mark," said Dr. Hamilton. "This results in a shiny effect to portions of the cancellation circle. By the application of chloroform the grease will be dissolved and portions of the blue. This would restore the cancellation ink to its original color."

LAY DOWN BIG BRITISH SHIPS

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The keel plates of two monster warships, the Orion, the improved dreadnought battleship, and the Lion, the cruiser battleship, were laid to-day, the former at Portsmouth and the latter at Devonport.

The construction of the Lion will mark a notable stage in the evolution of the cruising battleship. She will have 70,000 horsepower, while her immediate predecessor, the Indefatigable, had 45,000. The horsepower of the Mauritania and Lusitania is 68000.

She will displace 21,000 tons and her length will be 700 feet, constituting her the longest man-of-war ever laid down. As regards armament, she will be on an equality with the latest battleships. She will have probably a nominal speed of twenty-seven knots an hour.

CREW TAKEN OFF WRECKED FRUIT SHIP

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The crew of thirty men with Captain King to-day were rescued in lifeboats from the German fruit steamer Brewster, which is ashore on Diamond Shoals, near Cape Hatteras, pounded by giant seas and momentarily threatening to break up. Men from the Diamond Shoal lightship effected the rescue. Tremendous seas were running according to advices received by the steamer's agent here to-day, but the crew was transferred without a serious accident.

Their rescue was another triumph for the wireless "C. Q. D."

The message came from the government wireless station at Cape Hatteras. It said the ship was six miles off Diamond shoals lightship and between it and the mainland. Norfolk also picked up an air message. This was a "C. Q. D." call. It said the Brewster was in fourteen feet of water and was in danger of being dashed to pieces. The calls for help were repeated all through the early hours to-day.

The first "C. Q. D." message from the Brewster startled the United Wireless Company's operator at the Norfolk, Va., station. It was just the "C. Q. D" repeatedly, and it came clearly to the Norfolk station. After Norfolk sent the usual answer and signed the code for "Norfolk," the Brewster's operator began to talk.

Captain King of the Brewster was in the wireless operating room on his vessel when the messages were being sent, but there was nothing to indicate that the message from Norfolk had been received by the Brewster operator. He kept sending the call for help and the designation of the ship's position on the shoals.

The agent of the vessel is Bennett Hosmer. The Lloyds Insurance Company in this city was notified and arrangements were made to send help to the Brewster at once.

Diamond Shoals are 320 miles south of Sandy Hook and twenty miles south of Cape Hatteras.

The Brewster is of German register and carries fruit between here and Jamaica. She is of 1,517 gross tonnage, single screw, 249 feet long, 34.6 beam, and draws 26.9 feet of water.

IS HELD FOR DEATH FIGHT

Accused of murdering Francesco Stagliano in a fight at Winchester Sunday night, November 21, Santo Saloma, a young Italian, was arraigned before Judge Johnson at Woburn to-day. The charge was changed to manslaughter, and Saloma was held in $5,000 bail for the grand jury.

The two men were of a party of sixteen which celebrated a week ago Sunday night at a house at Harvard and Florence streets, Winchester. These two got into a row, which they decided to settle in the street. At 10:30 o'clock Stagliano, who came from Beverly, was found fatally stabbed and died a half hour later. The police found Saloma in the house with an ugly cut. They arrested him and the other fourteen men, as witnesses.

Chief William R. McIntosh of the Winchester police to-day presented the testimony he had secured from the Italians. Thomas O'Grady of Boston defended Saloma. The Italian's claim was that he was robbed of $40, but this was disputed by Chief McIntosh.

with the crime of murder. His defence will be that he was insane at the time, and that is what you are to bear in mind when you are asked whether you have any prejudice in the case. These answers will be made under oath and each juror must answer them truthfully on his conscience. You will also be asked whether you are opposed to finding a man guilty of a crime punishable by death. These questions are not asked as an easy means of escape from an arduous duty. You must answer the questions truthfully.

First Talesman Chosen.

Clerk John A. Ambrose then called on young Harmon to rise. He read the usual notice that he was about to be tried and told him that he had the right to challenge twenty-two of the talesmen without assigning a reason and as many more as he chose with proper reasons.

The selection of the jury was then begun. The first man questioned was Walter B. Kittredge. He was challenged by the government. The first talesman was chosen. He was Andrew F. Smith. He was sworn and took his seat in the jury box at 10:35 o'clock.

Young Harmon appeared in the court room to-day before either his counsel or the Judges. He was brought over from the jail by Deputy Sheriffs Charles G. Whitman and J. Willard Jones. The prisoner spent a restful night and ate a hearty breakfast. He was neatly dressed in a brown sack suit with a light necktie. He appeared to be in perfect health.

While he was waiting for the court to arrive he chatted for a few moments with Sheriff Fairbairn. He smiled as he talked and told the sheriff that he was feeling fine.

Crowd Outside Jail.

There was a small crowd about the building when Harmon was brought over from the jail. Many of these were women. The crowd, however, dwindled when it was learned that no spectators would be allowed in the courtroom.

Emotional insanity will be the defence of the Harmon lawyers.

Over one hundred and fifty witnesses have been summoned for the defence. The trial is expected to last three or four weeks.

WIPE OUT SALOONS, URGES DR. CRAFTS

Baptist ministers were stirred to-day by an address of the Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington over the evils of alcoholism. Dr. Crafts has just returned from an international conference upon the matter of alcholism, to which he was appointed as delegate by the United States. "Away with these saloons, high license or low license," he said. "The best argument to be made is that in the United States there are 40,000,000 people who want the saloon wiped out."

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Where patient is much weakened and crises may be expected in from five to ten days, probably not more than 10% to 20% recover. Where physicians aid with efforts to restrain fatal symptoms this percentage is increased. In cases where patients have from thirty to sixty days of life the efficiency is very much higher.

Where patients do not wait until bed-ridden probably three-fourths yield.

And in cases that take the new emollient treatment on the appearance of the disease nearly nine out of ten respond.

Albumen Casts and dropsy do not prevent recovery. The point is that the Renal inflammation should be attacked before the heart and physical system are broken down.

The new emollient treatment is known as Fulton's Renal Compound. It can be had in Boston from JAYNES & CO., 50 Washington st. We desire every patient to write us who is not noting the usual improvement by the third week. Literature mailed free. Jno. J. Fulton Co., 212 First St., San Francisco, Cal. ZELAYA MAY RETIRE FROM PRESIDENCY

This plan, understood to-day to be under the consideration of the State Department, is declared to have been suggested several months ago, although as yet no official action has been taken on it.

The commission, if appointed, would be composed of men thoroughly familiar with Central American affairs and the characters of the leaders in those countries.

The plan as outlined is for this body to work in conjunction with a similar body appointed by Mexico. Between them the two organizations would wield the big stick over the little countries, spanking them into shape when necessary and preserving peace generally.

So far has the plan gone in preliminary talk that the men best fitted for the task have already been chosen. Among the most prominent is Major-General George W. Davis, who was until recently Governor of the canal zone and formerly Governor in Porto Rico; Horace C. Knowles, William M. Collier, ex-Minister to Spain; Herbert C. Squiers, Minister to Panama; Thomas C. Dawson and Solicitor Scott of the State Department are others who have figured tentatively in the make up of the body.

The rebels are in control of Greytown, where Estrada's lieutenant, General Chamorro, has a force of 1,500 Zelayans bottled up, and fighting is reported near Rama, 150 miles inland from Greytown.

ATROCITIES BY ZELAYA PARALLEL THOSE OF LEOPOLD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Zelaya of Nicaragua was to-day branded the equal of King Leopold of Belgium in his methods of torture, by Senor Salvador Castrillo, diplomatic agent for the provisional Estrada government of Nicaragua. His barbarities were denounced as a disgrace to civilization. The prisons of Managua have been packed ever since Zelaya ascended to power.

The famous "Black Hole of Calcutta" has many a fairly good prototype in the Central American republic. The true story of these ancient prisons has never been told.

"Zelaya has perpetrated more actual crime than any other evil genius in the records of Latin America," said Castrillo. "He has imprisoned thousands of persons for so-called political crimes. Treason, intrigue or surveillance are charges trumped up by the dictator to throw any man, however blameless, behind the bars.

REPORT ZELAYA READY TO FLEE WITH $20,000,000

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 29.—Reports were current here to-day that President Zelaya of Nicaragua had resigned. Dr. Sequiera, consul for the Estrada provisional government, received many inquiries, but no confirmation could be obtained. The insurgents hope to drive Zelaya from power and capture him. It is believed that he has made preparations to flee with $20,000,000.

Los Angeles Girl May Become Greatest Pianist.

BERLIN—A sensation has been caused in music circles here by the wonderful musical gifts displayed by Olga Steeb of Los Angeles, Cal. Many think she is destined to become the world's greatest pianist. Paderewski is said to have made such a prediction several years ago. Miss Steeb, now only nineteen, plays from memory all of Bach's compositions (about 250) and some 400 other compositions. She shows extraordinary precocity in execution and interpretation. Olga Steeb is the daughter of a brewery clerk.

Accept Bode Bust as Genuine.

LONDON—After repeated tests and prolonged investigation, art critics are about willing to accept the statements of Dr. Wilhelm Bode, the German curator, that the bust which he purchased for the Emperor Frederick Museum from an English dealer for $30,000 is a genuine Da Vinci of fifteenth century workmanship. The reports that the bust had been executed by one Richard Cockle Lucas, a Southampton sculptor, who flourished in the middle of the last century, have practically been proven incorrect, this in spite of the statements of A. D. Lucas, a son of the sculptor, who declared that he had seen his father at work on the bust.

Telegraph Pictures Over Sea.

LONDON—Telegraphing pictures from London to New York is the problem at present engaging the attention of scientists. In a lecture given before the Royal Society of Arts Thorne Baker said that Professor Korn was likely to find a practical solution of sending photographs by the ordinary cable across the Atlantic, while he himself was endeavoring to perfect a wireless system for the same purpose, which had already given promising results in his laboratory.

Alsop Claim Interests Brazil.

RIO JANEIRO.—The Journal do Commercio publishes a four and one-half column statement of the Alsop claim, which was cabled by the State Department at Washington to the American Ambassador here, and several of the other papers print large excerpts, indicating the interest which the promise of arbitration has aroused. All the papers express satisfaction that an amicable arrangement has been reached by the United States and Chili for a settlement of the question.

Andes Pierced by a Tunnel.

VALPARAISO, Chili—The tunneling of the Andes, one of the most remarkable feats of modern engineering, has been finished. The completion of the work was made the occasion of a great demonstration of rejoicing by the populace. The tunnel will link the great Argentine Republic and Chili commercially and will pave the way for still closer political and social union in this part of South America.

Volcanoes Are Less Active.

SANTA CRUZ, Teneriffe.—The flow of lava from the craters has stopped, and activity is now apparent only within the craters, which have ceased to erupt.

WEATHER CAUSES A FISH FAMINE

There is a fish famine at T wharf owing to bad weather. Only 147,000 pounds were landed there to-day. There was demand for 1,000,000 pounds. As a consequence prices are soaring. Cod and haddock sold for as high as $6.50 per hundred weight. The great gale of last week and the present storm has kept fishermen off the Banks. Many of them are in port waiting for the weather to clear. The wind was blowing at a 55-mile velocity at Cape Cod to-day and drove most of the fleet to harbor shelters.

ASTOR AND PARTY SAIL FOR HOME

SAN JUAN, P. R., Nov. 29.—Colonel John Jacob Astor, his son Vincent, and the other members of his party have sailed from here on his yacht Nourmahal for Jacksonville, Fla.

Colonel Astor was delayed here while slight repairs were being made to the Nourmahal. She encountered some rough weather in the Caribbean during the recent hurricane, but was not seriously damaged.

FOR OLD PEOPLE

After reaching the age of forty the human system gradually declines. The accumulated poisons in the blood cause rheumatic pains in the joints, muscles and back. These warnings should be promptly relieved and serious illness avoided by using the following prescription which shows wonderful results even after the first few doses. It will eventually restore physical vigor.

"One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris compound; half pint of high grade whiskey. This to be mixed and used in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bedtime. The bottle to be shaken each time." Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it, as well as the other ingredients, can be had from any good druggist, or he will quickly get them. Anyone can mix them.

TAFT TO HIT SUGAR TRUST IN MESSAGE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Taft, in his first annual message to Congress, is expected to subject the "men higher up" in the sugar trust to an excoriation such as rarely finds a place in an official communication from the executive.

It is known that the President has been devoting considerable time to the construction of those paragraphs of the message which will deal with the sugar trust scandals. He will not beat around the bush in expressing his opinion of the conduct of the men he regards as responsible for the rottenness that has been discovered in the relations between employes of the New York Custom House and the agents of the trust.

The President, however, will spend a few words on the criminal acts of the men who used wires to falsify the scales on which the sugar imported by the sugar trust was weighed and three men who made false records of weights. He is convinced that these men would not have acted so harmoniously in their program of law-breaking without encouragement from other men in more responsible positions.

A Governmental attack on cotton gambling with the Sherman anti-trust law as the club was to-day declared to be under consideration here. Although no official word can be obtained on the matter, it is said that the Department of Justice is preparing a campaign against the speculators in Boston and New York. President Taft, it is declared, has taken the matter up with Attorney-General Wickersham, whose subordinates, with the Department of Commerce and Labor, are likely to have the matter in hand immediately.

OPEN INQUEST ON DEATHS AT BABY HOME

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 29.—The mysterious deaths of twenty-four children in the baby home of the Lighthouse Mission Association at East Providence are being investigated to-day. The principal witness at the inquest is A. H. Tourtellotte, president of the Lighthouse Mission Association.

Mr. Tourtellotte said that he is a minister of the gospel, but belongs to no denomination. Besides the baby home, the association has missions in Woonsocket and Providence. The association was incorporated two years ago, and the idea of the baby home was included in the articles of incorporation. The home is not under State supervision and it does not have to get State permission to be operated. It is supported, said Mr. Tourtellotte, by private donations and by charges made for the care of babies. There are no fixed charges, whatever the mothers are able to pay being accepted.

Mr. Tourtellotte said that he occasionally purchased supplies but he had nothing to do with the feeding of the children. That was in the hands of Superintendent Theodosia Doughty. The visiting physician of the home is Dr. William T. Knoot, a graduate of Harvard Medical School.

After the deaths of several children in June Mr. Tourtellotte said he investigated the cause and called in Dr. Seymour of Riverside. They were not able to find any unsanitary conditions.

In regard to Inez Johnson, the baby who died on November 16th, Mr. Tourtellotte did not know the cause of death, but the child had been sick from a month to six weeks. His duties took him to Providence and Woonsocket a good deal, but he was usually at home at night.

Mr. Tourtellotte was on the stand most of the day.

FR. GRENIER, STAUNCH FRIEND, SAYS LE BLANC GIRL IS NOT GUILTY

By JOHN J. McMAHON.

The general belief in Waltham that Hattie Le Blanc did not kill Clarence F. Glover, coupled with the emphatic utterance of the Rev. Fr. Pierre H. Grenier, her pastor, that she is innocent, is regarded as one of the most significant phases of the remarkable murder mystery.

One of the most thrilling pleas from a pulpit ever heard in Waltham was the appeal of Fr. Grenier yesterday in behalf of the accused girl. Tears rolled down his cheeks as he spoke, and many of those in the audience wept.

In this connection it should be remembered that a priest has many ways of getting at the real facts of a case of life and death that a layman does not possess. No matter how the tragedy results—whether in the freedom of this little girl, or in a tragedy infinitely more atrocious than the shooting of Glover, the killing of a sixteen-year-old girl in the electric chair—she has a faithful, staunch, friend in Father Grenier.

"Hattie Le Blanc is innocent. God will see that everything ends right."

This is the kindly pastor's belief. He expressed it to me in a long talk I had with him late last night in the parsonage next to the church.

He did not say this in a matter of fact tone. He said it with an earnestness that gripped and thrilled one. He said it like a man who knew.

Sure of Innocence.

His eyes dimmed with tears as he talked. It was easy to see by his talk and actions why he is loved by all his parishoners. And just to show the character of the man; he had not a harsh word to say about anyone in the case.

Later I talked with men and women, some of whom were of the same faith as he, and some who were not, and they told me that in the fifteen years he has been in Waltham, he has ever been the friend, counsellor, adviser, and protector of the unfortunate.

But to revert to the interview I had with him. He would not tell me out and out on what facts he based his belief in Hattie Le Blanc's innocence. Nevertheless it was easy to be seen that he had strong grounds for his declaration that his religious ward was not guilty of the crime charged her.

"I do not believe this frail, little girl killed Glover," he said. "She is but a child—a mere child. Girls of her type do not kill. They may be guilty of minor offences but they do not take life.

"I knew Hattie. She is one of my flock. She came to church every Sunday and worshipped as devotedly as the other communicants. Oh, How I pity her in her terrible predicament.

Poor Unfortunate Girl.

"When I learned her name had been dragged into the case I sent for her sisters, Irene and Lillian. They are so young, so child-like to be left by themselves. I talked to them and gave them advice. And because I advised it they went to live with their married sisters in Gloucester.

"Hattie is a poor, unfortunate girl. She may have been misguided. She may have been indiscreet. I know nothing, that I am at liberty to say, about these things. I only feel that she is innocent.

"I spoke of Hattie to my parishoners at the 8 o'clock and 10 o'clock masses to-day. I asked one and all to pray for the little girl, so that she would have courage to bear up under the great blow. I asked them to give her their moral support."

He spoke about Hattie and her family, and about the many developments of the case. There were tears in his eyes when he opened the door and said "Good night."

Lawyer Sees Priest.

Father Grenier's plea to his parishioners to pray for the accused girl was made at the two late masses, which he celebrated himself. He spoke in each case about fifteen minutes, immediately after the reading of the gospel.

Tears came to the eyes of women and men alike as the kindly priest briefly recounted the facts in the case, and told of Hattie Le Blanc's life. Many remained in the church after mass to say a prayer for the unfortunate girl.

Although she worshipped at Father Grenier's church, Hattie Le Blanc has thus far refrained from asking the French pastor to see her.

Nathan A. Tufts, her attorney, had a long talk with Father Grenier. What took place at this talk is not known, but it is said the conversation centered about the girl.

Father Grenier told the lawyer that he would go to the East Cambridge jail the moment the accused girl asked him. But in spite of all this, in spite of the fact that Hattie Le Blanc is a convent-bred girl, in spite of the fact that she has before turned to the priest for counsel, she has not asked him for spiritual advice.

Is there any hidden reason why she would not see the priest?

Is she afraid to see him because she fears the sight of the priest will cause her to break down and reveal the great secret which the police say, she has closely guarded—the secret that mayhap would implicate a third person?

Quiet Day for Widow.

Mrs. Glover, the widow of the slain man, spent a day just as lonely. Her home was barred to all visitors. Mr. and Mrs. George O. Freeman of Auburndale, who have been with her since her husband's death, were her only companions. Not even her lawyer called to see her.

Toby Le Blanc, Mrs. Glover's brother, who was arrested late Saturday for contempt of court, did not receive a caller during the entire day. In fact, had one called, he or she would not have been allowed to see the prisoner. Strict orders had been issued that no one, not even Mrs. Glover's attorney, should be permitted to talk to him.

Several times during the day Le Blanc asked that Attorney Elmore be called. The police did not obey the request. They say they had certain reasons, which they are not at liberty to divulge as yet, why Le Blanc should be kept absolutely by himself.

Efforts to make Le Blanc talk about himself were of no avail. He talked on all subjects regarding which he was spoken to, save one—the Glover murder mystery.

Has Many Important Facts.

Although to all appearances things were at a standstill yesterday, the Waltham police and the State detectives were not idle. State Detective Charles E. Byrnes was busy most of the day, but what he learned could not be ascertained.

District Attorney John J. Higgins, in charge of the investigation, has in his possession a number of important facts which have not as yet been given out for publication. These facts, it is understood on reliable authority, will shortly lead to startling developments.

The District Attorney is regarded as a most careful man, careful in what he does, careful in what he says.

Did he have a hidden reason for using the word "person," when in an interview he said: "We will keep at this investigation until we are cock sure of the right person?"

Did he use the word "person" instead of "man," "girl" or "woman" in order not to throw any light on the identity of the one he thinks guilty of the murder?

By the process of elimination the detectives who are probing the death of tectives have at last reached a point where they are able to centre their efforts on three persons.

One of these persons is Hattie Le Blanc, formally accused of the crime by the State, and held in the East Cambridge jail, pending a hearing in the Waltham Police Court.

The other two persons, who are still within the range of police investigation, depend upon their alibis to halt any move in their direction by the police.

Case Still Doubtful.

It is in order to safe-guard against any possibility of miscarriage of justice that the police are still keeping these three persons within the scope of their investigations.

All of these three persons, as yet under the watchful eyes of the law, have made statements contradicting each other. Only persistent and careful investigation can definitely determine which person is telling the truth, which are lying.

The police have formally charged the pretty French housemaid with killing her employer. They have had her arraigned on that charge. They have succeeded in having her put in jail to await the action of the lower court.

But here is the important point: They have not established a "reasonable" degree—giving the word "reasonable" its broadest interpretation—that Hattie Le Blanc killed Clarence F. Glover.

They say that the evidence to date strongly implicates the frail sixteen-year-old girl.

They do not say, however, that she had the exclusive opportunity for committing the crime.

They say and the girl admits it herself that she was with Glover at the time the fatal shots were fired.

They do not claim that they have positive evidence to show that there was not a third person in the laundry at the time of the shooting.

No Proof Against Girl.

They say, and they say it rightly, that Glover was shot with his own revolver.

They do not claim to have positive proof that the girl had possession of the revolver, before the shooting, at the time of the shooting, or after the shooting.

They say others would possibly have a motive for killing the young laundryman.

They do not assert they have established a motive in Hattie Le Blanc's case.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

"I BELIEVE LE BLANC GIRL KILLED GLOVER," SAYS WALTHAM CHIEF

Police Chief McKenna of Waltham, in a statement made to-day, declared it his opinion that there is no reason to believe that anyone else than Hattie Le Blanc had a hand in the murder of Clarence F. Glover.

Chief McKenna says that he can find no motive for anyone else having committed the murder, and that he thinks that Glover, in his dying statement, told the truth. This is Chief McKenna's satement:

"From the beginning I believed Hattie Le Blanc shot Clarence F. Glover, and that her body was in the river, or that she was not far away. I have had no reason since to change my opinion. As far as I am concerned the mystery—what little mystery there was—was solved last Tuesday night when the police found Hattie Le Blanc in Mrs. Glover's house. There is nothing to show a motive for a third person in the crime.

"We know that Glover and his wife were at the Copley Square Hotel the Thursday evening before the murder, and that they attended the theatre in Boston that Thursday evening, returning in good humor. Glover and his wife were together in the afternoon of the day of the murder, apparently enjoying each other's company in an automobile ride. They attended the football game. There was no evidence thus far presented to us of any estrangement between them.

"Tobie Le Blanc is odd. He is steady as far as we can learn and we know of no reason why he should desire to hurt any one. He is fairly well-to-do, and Glover could have harmed him in no way.

"Whoever reasons that the dying statement of Glover was correct is every detail and was the true solution of the crime is sure to be right at the end. The reporters have not placed enough importance upon the dying statement of the murdered man. I attach great importance to it, and it should be first considered by every one connected with the crime. You may say I am satisfied there is no mystery in the case, and what apparent mystery there was in the disappearance of Hattie Le Blanc was solved last Tuesday night."

shots. Overcome with fear, I then ran home as quickly as possible."

Reverses Former Statement.

In her former statement, as it came to the public, Hattie Le Blanc said that she had gone to the laundry as the result of an agreement made that morning with Glover, and that she found the door open and Glover there. She had a struggle with the man and ran upstairs. She added:

"After Glover got upstairs I saw the revolver in his hand. He threatened to kill me if I told anybody about what had happened. I don't know where he took that revolver from. I never had the pistol in my hands at all. I think he shot himself.

"After he chased me upstairs I jumped through the window and as I was leaving I heard a shot. I didn't see anybody in the building but us."

Nathan Tufts, senior counsel for Hattie Le Blanc, charged with the murder of Glover, declared to-day that he is now ready for a trial of the case against the girl.

"When the case comes up on Wednesday of next week we are going to be in court ready for a trial—a real hearing of the merits of the matter. We do not propose to let this girl remain under this unjust charge a moment longer than possible. I am satisfied that she is innocent and I have evidence upon which I feel confident she will be discharged."

Heel-Print a Clew.

The discovery of a broken young poplar tree in the park reservation close to the window from which Glover threw the revolver with which he was shot, is regarded as highly important by Attorney Tufts, counsel for Hattie Le Blanc, as indicating that there was a third person in the laundry when the shots were fired. The tree, under which is the imprint of the heel of a man's shoe, could have been broken by a person of average weight using it as a means of reaching the top of the board fence which incloses the park at this point. It is not known whether the authorities had discovered that this tree was broken.

Le Blanc's manner in the cell has been, according to some of the police, much like that of a demented person. They have kept a strict watch upon his cell at all times. His guards say that he has been willing to converse upon all topics excepting the murder. When questioned about that he has grown violent in manner and has shouted "Send for Elmore, do you hear?" He also repeatedly asked for his "pills," which were taken away from him.

Hattie Has Callers.

While Toby Le Blanc was pacing his cell and demanding that Lawyer Elmore be admitted to his presence, Hattie Le Blanc, the girl charged with the murder, was passing the time more pleasantly at the East Cambridge Jail. She was visited by Attorney Nathan Tufts, her counsel, who was accompanied by the Rev. Anton Rabel, pastor of the French Catholic church at North Cambridge; a woman stenographer, Attorney Morton and Dr. J. H. Day.

This party spent two hours in conference with the girl, and when they left she seemed to be in better spirits than at any time since she was arrested.

Attorney Tufts would not say what had transpired during the conference. He was asked if she had charged a third person with being in the laundry when she and Glover were there, but he declined to answer the question.

"We have done nearly all the work that we set out to do in her behalf," he said; that a young girl without the advice of parents is liable to great wrongs.'"

Toby Le Blanc's Movements.

Mrs. Cook, who owns the lodging house at No. 5 Taylor street, South End, where Toby Le Blanc has lodgings, says that he was at home on the evening of the murder. She says that she saw him in the hal, near the bathroom at some time between 6:30 o'clock and 8. She said that she could not fix the time definitely and cannot say whether he went to his room or to the street. When she made up his room on the next morning she found that the bed had been occupied.

It is said that Le Blanc went to California three times—the first time about fifteen years ago, when he was threatened with tuberculosis. He made two trips for the benefit of his health and the third time went with four other street railway employes to engage in fruit raising. The project was not successful, and he returned to the East.

GIRL DESERVES MUCH PITY, SAYS FRENCH CURATE

The Rev. Father Antone Rabel, curate of the French Catholic Church of Notre Dame de Pitie of North Cambridge, who saw Hattie Le Blanc at East Cambridge Jail, said to-day:

"Hattie Le Blanc is a little girl and looked to me like a very, very good girl and she is deserving of much pity."

Father Rabel went to the jail yesterday in company with Attorney Nathan Tufts, the girl's senior counsel, Attorney Morton, the junior counsel, Dr. J. H. Day and a woman stenographer.

The curate to-day spoke briefly of the meeting, saying:

"I visited Hattie Le Blanc simply as a Catholic priest in order to give her encouragement and to administer anything to her within my power from the Catholic Church. She was not a parishioner of mine and I do not know why I was asked to go to the jail to see her, although Father Pastor and myself frequently visit the jail.

"Perhaps I was asked because I am a French priest and because Hattie Le Blanc speaks very little English, although I think she understands it well. Dr. Day, who accompanied Lawyer Tufts, is a very fine French scholar and, as my services as an interpreter were not needed, I acted the part of a Catholic priest."

"Believe me the girl is innocent of the crime." This last was said with emphasis, indicating the sincerity of the lawyer's belief.

At both services at the French Catholic Church at Waltham, Father Grenier asked his congregations to pray for the speedy release of Hattie Le Blanc, whom he declared an innocent victim of circumstances. The priest was affected almost to the point of tears, and there were tears in the eyes of men and women in the church as, in response to his simple diction, they knelt to offer up a prayer in behalf of the accused girl. Father Grenier said:

"An incident occurred in our midst last week which causes me to speak a few words in behalf of that person who is now back of strong doors in prison accused by the authorities of a crime," declared the priest.

"That person, or rather that child, is one of my parishioners; therefore, it is my duty to-day to appeal to you all in her behalf, also to request you all to refrain from expressing to others opinions and judgments. Let your thoughts of her be of a charitable nature. Do not turn your back to her in her hour of need. That poor child is innocent until she is proven guilty by the justices. She is isolated from her relatives and friends and can be seen only by persons permitted by the authorities. I ask you all to pray to God to give her counsel the necessary power and light that he may prove her innocence, so she may not suffer for this act of others done with malice. I offer no apology in regard to what her conduct may have been, for those of us who are older understand

ASKS BUSINESS MEN TO PRAY

Business and professional men of the Episcopal church in this city are asked to observe this week as one of prayer. Instead of trying to get the best of one another in business or in their respective professions, they are urged to spend this week in prayer for the man who is down and out.

In furthering this interest, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, an organization of laymen, has arranged for daily prayer at noon in St. Paul's Church. To-day the meeting was addressed by George Randall of Boston, who said:

"I know of a young man who is manager of a large steel company in the Middle West, which employs 10,000 men. He takes each one of his employes and makes them an object of prayer. His influence is remarkable in this line. We in Boston should emulate the good example of this business man."

Other speakers for the week are Professor Lawrence B. Evans, Stanton H. King, superintendent of the Sailors' Haven; Robert A. Woods, Head of the South End House; Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, director of the School for Social Workers; Robert H. Gardiner, president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

AGED SHERIFF DEAD.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 29.—Charles E. Goss, aged eighty-seven, well known as the oldest deputy sheriff in Massachusetts, is dead here. He was being treated in Concord for sickness. He had lived in Methuen, Mass., since he was twenty-three years old.

SUGAR TRUST SPARS FOR AIR

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The trial of seven former employes of the Sugar Trust, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government by entering short weights on imports of sugar, began to-day in the Federal Circuit Court, before Judge James L. Martin of Vermont. The prosecution is under the direction of former United States District Attorney Henry L. Stimson, acting as a special United States District Attorney General. He is assisted by W. T. Dennison.

The men under indictment are James F. Bendernagel, former superintendent of the Williamsburg refinery of the trust; Oliver Spitzer, former dock superintendent, and Thomas Kehoe, Jean M. Voelker, Patrick J. Hennessy, John R. Coyle and Edward A. Boyle, former assistant weighers.

Henry M. Cochrane, who appeared for of the defendants, except Spitzer, announced that Voelker is ill in a hospital and has no chance for recovery, and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. Former Senator Lexow appeared for Spitzer. Both Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Lexow strongly urged that the case be postponed owing to the "inflamed condition of the public mind." Judge Martin dismissed the witnesses and jurors so that the motion might be heard in Chambers.

PITTSBURG GIRLS TO SHED THEIR "RATS"

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 29.—Department store managers have given their saleswomen until January 1 to discard "rats" in their hair.

They claim "rats" are unsanitary and that the girls who wear them spend too much time arranging their hair.

BOMB HURLED IN TENEMENT

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Supposed members of the "Black Hand" early to-day hurled a bomb into the hallway of the six-story double tenement house at No. 249 East Fourteenth street, which they first littered with sawdust and papers and saturated with oil with the evident purpose of destroying the barber shop of Nigalia Brothers on the ground floor. Twenty families, numbering more than 100 men, women and children, were awakened and thrown into a panic by an explosion of such force that the building seemed to rock, while a large hole was torn through the flooring.

Miss Ruth Clifford saw two men emerge from the doorway and run. She pursued them, but stopped when threatened with death. Policeman Mackay, who heard both [illegible] and her cries, hurried to the scene, but the men had disappeared.

SON OF IRISH PATRIOT DEAD

MANILA, Nov. 29.—Thomas Meagher, son of the Irish patriot, died to-day of pneumonia, following an attempt at suicide, while temporarily insane from a nervous breakdown.

He was for some time at West Point military academy, and had lived many years in Montana and California. For several years he had occupied minor posts in the government here.

Thomas Bennett Meagher was appointed to the United States Military Academy from New York in 1872. He was not graduated. His father, Thomas Francis Meagher, was one of the most brilliant leaders of the "Young Ireland" movement of 1848. His speech in Dublin on "The Sword," is a classic which is recited by pupils in elocution contests throughout the English-speaking world. He commanded the famous Irish brigade in the Civil War and was afterwards appointed Governor of Montana, then a United States territory. Soon afterwards he fell overboard one night from a steamer on the Mississippi and was drowned. His body was never discovered.

HELD IN $3,000 ON CHARGE OF ARSON

LYNN, Nov. 29.—When Policeman Leonard Hall tried the door of the restaurant of Frank Gomez, at No. 65 Central avenue, early to-day, he discovered a candle burning beneath the counter and close to some boxes of matches and papers. A few minutes later he found Gomez not far from the restaurant. The policeman arrested him. Gomez was arraigned before Judge Lummus later in the day, charged with arson in attempting to set fire to his restaurant for the purpose of defrauding an insurance company. He was held in $3,000 bail for a continued hearing to-morrow. Gomez has owned the restaurant three months.

Hear it yourself - the Edison
Phonograph

You cannot judge the Edison by hearing other kinds. The Edison is the sound-reproducing machine at its best. It is not a talking machine. It is a Phonograph reproducing every sound faithfully—the song exactly the way the singer sang it; the opera exactly the way the orchestra played it; the two-step exactly the way the band rendered it.

That is the Edison Phonograph as Mr. Edison makes it—the object of his constant, daily care.

When he says he wants to see an Edison Phonograph in every home, he means your home. Do you not want one there? Do you not need this amusement maker for your own sake, for your children and for your guests? Hear one today. Hear all the others too and compare. Only in this way can you know that what we say is true.

Edison Phonographs	$12.50 to $125.00
Edison Standard Records	.35
Edison Amberol Records (twice as long)	.50
Edison Grand Opera Records	.75

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us.

MRS. SEARS RECOVERS FROM FALL; TO LEAVE HOSPITAL TO-MORROW

Recovering quickly from a slight accident at the Bussey Institute in the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears of Arlington street and Commonwealth avenue, is quite comfortable to-day at the Faulkner Hospital. She expects to leave the hospital to-morrow for her own mansion in the Back Bay.

Mrs. Sears went to the Bussey Institute in her automobile yesterday and was received by Professor Charles S. Sargent, who has charge of the institute. She started up the stairway to the second floor. The stairway is being remodelled and the steps cease abruptly at the landing. Mrs. Sears did not see this and walked off into a space ten feet in depth. She received [illegible] fall, but escaped with bruises. [illegible] ted at first that she had broken three ribs.

[illegible] is the widow of Joshua Montgomery Sears, who was one of Boston's merchant princes and who built the noted Sears mansion.

COUNCIL SLATE TO BE CHANGED, SAYS LEADERS

Despite statements by men on the City Council slate of the Citizens' Municipal League that they will not withdraw, leaders of the league say that the ticket will be changed and that one representative from East Boston or Charlestown and another from Brighton will be named. The executive committee of the league will meet to-night in Room 211, Kimball Building.

Activity at the Storrow headquarters to-day was along the line of preparation for another invasion of the South Boston wards to-night. A second handshaking meeting will be held at Broadway and Dorchester street. Storrow managers are looking for headquarters in East Boston, Charlestown, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Brighton, where similar meetings may be held.

Bernard J. Rothwell, acting President of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, is the latest to condemn the City Council slate of the Citizens' Municipal League. Mr. Storrow declared the day after the slate was named that it did not satisfy him.

John E. Potts on Slate.

Rumor to-day had it that the so-called "Democratic Council slate" is to have the name of John E. Potts added to it. Potts is well known in labor circles.

President James Donovan of the Democratic City Committee to-day began his end of the Storrow campaign in earnest. His work will be directed from the headquarters of the City Committee in the Old South building. Fitzgerald's lieutenants say they will protest against the use of the City Committee headquarters for the Storrow campaign.

Mayor Hibbard replied to-day to the demand of Former Election Commissioner Charles R. Saunders that he withdraw as a candidate for re-election by enlarging his campaign headquarters at No. 8 Beacon street, installing a new campaign manager and ordering his signature seekers to round up every name they can get.

In the Race to Stay.

The Mayor told callers at his office to-day that if Mr. Saunders and others are actuated only by a desire to defeat Former Mayor Fitzgerald the best move for them is to withdraw James J. Storrow from the race. "I'm in this contest till January 11," he said.

Close friends of the Mayor said to-day that he has changed his mind about conducting a campaign with no other issue than "my record." The Mayor, they said, has a few cards up his sleeve that he'll shake down and show to the public before the race has gone much farther.

They also said that Hibbard will not be put in the shade by other candidates when it comes to attacking his opponents. They intimated that Candidate Storrow will get just as many missiles from the Hibbard artillery as Candidate Fitzgerald will.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

DUEL OVER GIRL; ONE NEAR DEATH

WORCESTER, Nov. 29.—A quarrel over a girl between Bartholomew Clappabian and Tony Roneldo led to a pistol duel in which Clappabian and the girl were wounded.

Clappabian is in the City Hospital, and the surgeons fear that he will die. The bullet struck him in the neck.

The bullet which struck the girl inflicted only a slight wound.

Roneldo ran, but was captured, and was locked up. Eight shots were fired by the men, and the fusillade brought policemen from many blocks around, so that Roneldo had no chance of getting away.

At police headquarters Roneldo admitted the shooting.

HORNETS CAUSE OF DEACON'S DOWNFALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A hornets' nest under the body of Deacon Hiram Dolbin's family wagon may result in the deacon having to stand trial before a committee of the old Dutch Church at Towaco, N. J. The old gentleman was driving to church when the faithful old gray horse started off at a terrific clip. As the runaway passed the church Deacon Dolbin was standing up yelling at the animal at the top of his voice. Those who witnessed the affair vowed that the deacon uttered "cuss" words. The old gray kept up the pace until from sheer exhaustion it fell in its tracks. Then it was discovered that the poor old gray's flanks were a mass of lumps and hornets were flying around his legs.

CONSTIPATION

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. In my opinion constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are thirty-two feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged, the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produces rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver complaint can expect to have a clear complexion, or enjoy good health.

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weakening; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

2 NEAR DEATH FROM POISON PUT IN CANDY

LYNN, Nov. 29.—Bertram G. Lawton and his young wife are recovering to-day at their home, No. 27 Vine street, of poisoning which Lawton attributes to Christmas candy his wife bought last week. Lawton, who formerly made candy himself, says nitric acid is sometimes put in the Christmas candy sold to children and believes that was the poison used in this case.

Lawton believes that he and his wife might have died had he not recognized the presence of the poison when he did. As it was, they were seriously ill.

He gave a sample of the candy to the police, who will send it to the state Board of Health for analysis. In the meantime, the Lynn board is expected to investigate the kind of candy prepared for sale to the children at Christmas.

Lawton says that the confectioner who sold him the candy told him it was manufactured by a Boston concern.

BIBLE READING IN SCHOOL RESUMED

FREEPORT, L. I., Nov. 29.—Beginning to-day the Bible will again be read in the public schools of this village, notwithstanding the order of Mr. Draper, State Commissioner of Education, who has received objections from the Rev. Charles A. Logue, a Catholic priest, that the practice be discontinued.

The board of education, which suspended the reading of the book in the schools for the last week by the commissioner's order, will take advantage of the stipulation in his order which forbids the reading "during customary school hours."

NEWS OF ALL SIDES PRINTED BY AMERICAN

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald in a speech last night before the Douglas Club of Ward 13 defended his record and his administration while Mayor.

It was a characteristic speech, in which the ex-Mayor spoke plainly and spared no one. He declared that the Finance Commission had persistently hounded him and had finally pounced on an honest man, Michael Mitchell, and had sent him to jail upon a charge of graft.

Mr. Fitzgerald is quoted by the Globe this morning as saying:

> Every newspaper but one in Boston is advocating Mr Storrow. The Boston Globe alone is fair in this fight, and is printing the news and is placing the issues fairly and squarely.

Mr. Fitzgerald, to an AMERICAN reporter this afternoon declared that he had said no such thing. He did say that "the AMERICAN and the Globe are the only papers fair in this fight. They print the news fairly," but the Globe omitted to mention the name of the AMERICAN. Probably an oversight on the part of some slipshod reporter.

It is not necessary, of course, for the AMERICAN to say that all the candidates have been and will be treated fairly by the AMERICAN, and that all the news of all the parties will be published without [illegible] or favor, no matter who may be helped or harmed.

In concluding his speech Mr. Fitzgerald declared emphatically that rapid transit is needed, and he pledged himself, if elected, to go to the Legislature and use all his influence to secure legislation for a connection of Park Square with the South Station and for a subway from the South Station over to South Boston and out through Dorchester.

News of Partyless Politics

Forty-three more days to go.

Oh you Matt Cummings and J. Henry Duckery. The election commissioners are waiting to hear from you.

Candidate Storrow will have at least two headquarters in Ward 20. The old headquarters of the "Tipcarts" on East street have already been placed at his disposal and it is understood that another will be established to accommodate voters in the upper roads section of the ward.

It takes the heat of a political campaign to cement differences. Mayor Hibbard's secretary, "Jimmy" White, and Superintendent of Streets Emerson have not been on the best of terms for the last two years, but now both are working harmoniously together to do what they can to re-elect their chief.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald has secured the signatures of every member of the Lamplighters' Union to his nomination papers. There's a reason. The lamplighters received their twenty-five cents per day increase during the first administration of Fitzgerald.

Many Dorchester and Roxbury voters will meet Mr. Storrow at his headquarters to-day and to-morrow between 5:30 p. m. and 7 p. m. in response to invitations which have been widely circulated throughout these districts. "The coming campaign does not involve issues merely personal to me, but questions with which you are concerned," says the personal letter which has been sent out.

Councilman Frank A. Goodwin's campaign for a councilmanic seat has attracted the attention of voters in all sections of the city chiefly through the attacks which he has made upon the tax-dodgers. Two members of the executive committee of the Citizens' Municipal League have already placed themselves upon record as favoring the election of Goodwin, despite the fact that ex-Mayor Nathan Matthews, his particular foe, is a prominent factor in the League and against the East Boston man.

"I've been twenty-five years out of college and I have yet to see a sick day," says Mr. Storrow. "Meeting 300 or more people a day is a little more strenuous work than I expected, but I anticipate going through this campaign without having a sick day. Of course I may get tired, but as far as succumbing, you can wager I will follow the hottest pace that can be set."

Quite a few who thought that Plan 2 of the new charter would make it much easier to secure a nomination for the City Council have been disappointed. As a matter of fact the candidates have found it much harder work to secure the 5,000 signatures necessary for a nomination than to secure a party nomination in the old way. A good proof of the truth of this statement is the fact that there will not be more than twenty-five candidates for the nine places in the next City Council, whereas last year there were forty-nine.

Mr. Storrow was obliged to disappoint a number who visited his South Boston headquarters expecting to sell dance tickets. All the candidates report that this is the most expensive campaign in this respect that they have ever experienced. While they find it hard to refuse, most of the candidates have made it a rule not to purchase tickets.

The general belief that all camps will have a barrel to spend in the coming campaign has operated to make the lives of those in charge of the various headquarters miserable. Jerry Desmond of the Storrow forces has used his tact in dispensing of about 1,000 appeals already; Billy Boudrot, the smooth man of the Hibbard headquarters, has turned away about as many more with a soft answer, and Colonel Field of the Fitzgerald forces has handled this class of visitors with a result that indicates he has gained experience by previous campaigns.

Mr. Hearst on the Duties of Journalism

At a dinner given the other evening, at which many prominent business men were present, Mr. Hearst was asked to speak on "Journalism," and said:

It appears to me that Mr. Shonts has assembled this many of his friends with the benevolent purpose, first, of proving to you that I am not as black as I am painted, and, second, of proving to me that you are not as black as you are printed.

I am perfectly willing to concede both of these propositions without argument, as far as we in our private capacities are concerned.

I will proceed at once, therefore, to the discussion of our public capacities.

I am here as a newspaper man. I have been asked in this symposium of varied interests to speak on any subject as long as it is associated with journalism.

I am glad to find Mr. Shonts in the broad and liberal frame of mind of the young lady who liked any color as long as it was red, and I am glad and grateful also to have assigned to me a subject of journalism rather than of politics.

I know something about journalism, and I have a high opinion of my profession.

I regard a newspaper publisher as an attorney retained by the people to protect their rights and their interests.

I believe it to be as much the duty of a newspaper publisher to place the interests of the people above all questions of personal friendship or personal advantage as it is the duty of an honorable attorney to place the interests of his clients above all such considerations.

If journalism is sometimes found in active and critical opposition to certain business interests, it is merely because these business interets have come into direct conflict with the rights of the public, which it is the main duty of journalism to defend.

"Should Develop a Higher Conception."

If journalism maintains an attitude of greater approval toward other business interests, it is because of the disposition of the business men in control of these interests to entertain a broad and higher conception of their duties and responsibilities to the public.

I believe that there is an ever-growing tendency among the most thoughtful and the most progressive and the most influential of American business men to consider themselves merely as trustees of power and wealth which it is their duty to employ in the interest of the public.

It is but natural that the American business man should develop this higher conception of the duty of wealth, for the American business man does not accumulate wealth for the luxury it affords, but for the power and the distinction it confers.

Wealth, by whatever methods accumulated, may confer power, but wealth accumulated by unjust methods certainly should not, and does not, in this day confer distinction.

There are two ways in which a man of wealth may gain the esteem of the community.

One is the way in which he spends his money, and the other is the way in which he makes his money.

There is little to be criticised in the way in which American business men spend their money.

They spend so little upon themselves that they may often be recognized by the plainness of their apparel and the simplicity of their pleasures.

They spend some part upon their families, as they should, but they almost universally spend the greater part of their income in the creation of new enterprises or in the endowment of charitable or educational institutions.

There is no proper criticism of wealth expended in so worthy a manner.

"Money May Be a Measure of Disgrace."

Nor is any proper criticism of wealth acquired through service rendered the community.

But there is proper criticism and ever-increasing condemnation of wealth acquired through extortion and destructive speculation.

Money made in proportion to service rendered is a badge of honor.

The greater the compensation the greater must have been the service.

But money acquired through extortion is merely a measure of disgrace, and journalism when it inveighs against such business methods but registers the rising tide of popular resentment.

The American people will no longer tolerate business methods which are essentially unjust and unfair.

There are certain diseases which are cured by the taxin which they themselves create.

There are certain evils that are remedied by their own excesses.

And extortion in business has so aroused popular indignation that it will soon accomplish its own undoing.

The castles on the Rhine are monuments to the lawlessness and greed of the robber barons of the Middle Ages; but they are more.

In their ruined condition they are monuments to the retribution which overtook the robber barons.

They are monuments to the aroused sentiment among the people, among the plundered merchants, among the legitimate business interests of that day, which finally impelled the Emperor Otto to invade the Rhenish territory and raze these robber strongholds to the ground.

The robber barons of the Rhine who plundered the merchants in their passing ships and oppressed the people are not so widely different from a certain class of unscrupulous business men of to-day who abuse the power of combination to extort a tribute which they do not earn.

I do not oppose combination, but the abuse of it. The evil of monopoly even lies in the misuse of it.

"Duty to Prevent Overcapitalization."

Intelligent and legitimate combination in business is merely a phase of higher organization and invariably results in greater economy and greater efficiency.

Such combination is therefore beneficial, and will benefit not only the business creators of the combination, but the public generally whenever the public is allowed to participate in the advantages.

To my mind, therefore, it is the duty of government not to prevent the combination which is beneficial, but to insure public participation in the benefits.

To my mind it is the duty of government to prevent overcapitalization and to control business of a public or semi-public character where it reaches the point where it is independent of competition.

Government ownership is a remedy for the abuses of some monopolies, but government ownership has its limitations.

It is obviously impossible for the Government to own all business of an exclusive character.

The creation of competition, on the other hand, is generally a step backward and frequently wholly fails of its main object.

In St. Louis, for example, there are three competing telehpone lines, and the sole result of that competition is that a subscriber is compelled to pay for three telephones instead of one.

Obviously a monopoly of the service would improve that situation, and if the monopoly were abused the service could be either taken over by the Government or regulated by a Government commission.

I have not time in a brief after-dinner talk to discuss these important questions in sufficient detail.

I hope, however, that I have made clear the point which I have in mind, namely, that it is the province of journalism not only to protect the interests of the people, but to do so with intelligence and judgment.

It is the difficult duty of journalism to distinguish between what is good and what is bad, not only in business methods, but in all other matters which vitally affect the interests of the people.

It is the serious task of journalism to distinguish, too, between what is good and what is bad in the remedies proposed for every evil, and, as in the instance I have cited, to advise the people not to be diverted into an attack upon combination in business, which is in itself beneficial, but to carry on a war of extermination against the abuse of the power of combination in the hands of men who are selfish and unscrupulous to the point of criminality.

In these complex and difficult situations I feel that the conscientious publisher should have the support of the people and also of that higher element in the business world which recognizes its own duties and obligations to the people.

FOUR HUNDRED LAID OFF AT NAVY YARD

Due to the departure of a number of vessels and the lack of work on the remaining ships in the Charlestown Navy Yard, between 300 and 400 men will be laid off to-day and to-morrow. It is said that within three weeks 1,000 more will suspend work. This will leave the smallest number of men in the yard that have been on the labor list for years. The only vessel remaining in the yard that requires a large force of workmen is the battleship Illinois. Orders are awaited to proceed with the work on this ship and until the orders arrive there will be nothing doing for the workmen.

SPAIN NOW FACING POLITICAL UPSET

MADRID, Nov. 29.—As the result of a split in the ranks of the Liberals, Spain is on the verge of another political upset. The resignation of the Duke of Tovar, a personal friend of King Alfonso, who quit the post of civil Governor of Madrid, to which he was appointed by Premier Moret, has caused alarm. The Duke declared that as a Liberal he could not ally himself with Moret, who he accused of being reactionary.

REFUSE TO AFFILIATE.

By unanimous vote Lodge 9 of the Boilermakers of Boston is on record to-day as refusing to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, preferring to remain independent and carry on its fight alone. This lodge formerly belonged to the International, but joined the ranks of the independents when the "United Brotherhood" was formed.

WIVES SHIRK DUTY, REPEATS MRS. HILLIS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Newell Dwight Hillis, wife of the pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, not only meant what she said the other day in declaring that American wives made slaves of their husbands, but now goes farther and says that it is time the wives woke up, that they are abusing their husbands, that the husbands are worked to death to pay their wives' bills and that the wives are not doing their duty.

Mrs. Hillis's present remarks are in form of an answer to the suffragette camp. The suffragettes resented the original remarks made by Mrs. Hillis in an address to the Emma Willard Association. At that time she said that the women of this country were sybarites in silk, while their husbands were sent out to slave and struggle. The suffragettes raised a protest and Mrs. Hillis was asked if she meant all she told the Emma Willards.

Now she says:

Women Dodge Duty.

"I did not intend to offend the suffragettes, but I am positive that all I told the Emma Willard Association was true. It is about time that the women of the United States woke up to the fact that they are not doing their duty by their husbands or families."

Warming to her subject, Mrs. Hillis handed out a few more thoughts for the wives and suffragettes to consider, saying in part:

"The unprecedented advance both in material prosperity and in mechanical inventions has revolutionized the status of women as houseworkers and homebuilders. When there were no sewing machines or ready-made clothing or prepared breakfast foods or gas stoves or caterers or bakeries, women had to stay at home and do a large part of the housework, cooking and sewing with their own hands. There were no kindergartens, and children—for there were children in American families in those days—had to be taken care of and taught by their own mothers. Girls learned how to sew and do housework.

"Now all this is changed. It is as cheap—and much easier—to buy ready made clothing as to make it at home, and the long quiet hours when mother and daughter sat together uninterrupted by telephones have passed away. There is nothing in our modern life that can make up to our daughters for the loss of those quiet hours. It is little wonder that American girls are high strung and nervous and frequently on the verge of hysteria.

Too Much of Leisure.

"She is a rare woman in these days who knows how to cook well enough to be willing to risk the humiliation of family criticism. Women telephone for things nowadays. The American home in its own house is becoming rarer and rarer, and yet it has always been regarded as one of the bulwarks of our national character. All these things give increasing freedom and leisure to American women. There has never before existed in the history of the world women who have had such freedom from responsibility as the American women.

"The old basis of chivalry was frailty and dependence. The spirit of protection sprang up because women needed protection. But the American girl of to-day scorns all that. She is self-reliant and self-sufficient. The six-foot captain of the basketball team laughs outright at the slender youth who would protect her.

"Should women undertake to share men's business responsibilities? Not at all. The competition only increases his difficulties. Shall we go back to home-made clothing and simpler living? We cannot. The men wouldn't have it. It is for women to find their place and fall into it. There are national movements—religious, charitable and the like—in which women may do fine work quietly. The club idea has been overdone."

QUIT HUBBY NO. 2 FOR MOTHER-IN-LAW

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Maryan Andrew Brugiere-Denning, whose intention to come to San Francisco to have set aside the three-year-old divorce decree obtained by her former husband, Dr. Peter Brugiere, was recently made public, has caused no little surprise among her friends by announcing her present residence in Paris with that same former husband's mother and her separation from her latest husband, the New York bond broker for the Goulds.

LUDLOW STRIKE BREAKERS ARE AT WORK UNDER GUARD

HOUSEHOLD GOODS OF LUDLOW STRIKERS. WINDOWS AND DOORS BARRED UP AFTER FAMILIES WERE PUT OUT.

LUDLOW, Nov. 29.—Fifty strike-breakers were brought into town to-day by trolley from Springfield to work in the twine mills of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates. There are 1,500 men and women on strike.

The strike breakers were taken into the mills under guard of the 200 special policemen brought here from Boston at the beginning of the strike.

The scene to-day in the street is a pitiful one. All the household goods of the 250 families evicted Saturday were destroyed during last night's rain. They had been piled up on the streets and sidewalks. In most cases they represented the entire worldly possessions of their owners.

The strikers have started a movement to appeal to Governor Draper to stop the evictions. As rapidly as possible it is evident that unless stopped the company will evict the families of the entire 1,500 strikers from their homes. The strikers are able willing to pay rent as before and want to stay in Ludlow to see if the strike cannot be settled. If all settlement fails, the strikers are willing to move elsewhere to find work.

More Families to Go.

On authority of Sidney Stevens, agent of the mills, it became known to-day that twenty more families will be thrown out of their homes Thursday.

The wholesale evictions have worked great hardship, especially on the women and children. To-day mothers of families went crying about the streets trying to gather up their water-soaked household goods.

The evictions are being carried out under orders of the owners of the mills. The Ludlow Manufacturing Associates have their headquarters in the Shawmut Bank building, Boston, and the mills are capitalized for $4,000,000. Cranmore N. Wallace, is president and Charles W. Hubbard secretary and treasurer. Sidney Stevens is the manufacturing agent with headquarters at the mills, and the advisory trustees are E. W. Bowditch, vice-president; Francis Blake, W. D. Winsor, E. H. Harding, H. O. Underwood and Phillip Stockton, who is well known in Boston society, and is president of the City Trust Company at No. 50 State street, Boston.

Evictions Draw Crowds.

The news of the eviction brought nearly 10,000 visitors to town Sunday by trolleys, carriages and automobiles. Most of the evicted persons found refuge in the homes of friends not yet turned out, but the men and women stood on guard over their household goods in the streets. Among the visitors was the Rev. George Venn Daniels of the Carew Street Baptist Church, Springfield, who in his sermon last night told of what he had seen at Ludlow.

"In the good old State of Massachusetts this afternoon," he said," I saw little children and women sobbing near piles of their household goods in the streets. It can never be right for wealth to turn women and children into the streets. The people went out not because they wouldn't pay rent nor because they wouldn't pay rent, but because the owners wanted them out.

"O devastated Russia, landlord ridden Ireland, and free Massachusetts, religious Springfield! I saw this afternoon a girl who had worked in the mills for five years, three of the years at $4 a week, and in the later years she supported a husband who could not work because he had consumption, thrown out into the streets!

"I am told that there are few companies in the State that make the profit that this one does. The highest wages I heard of this afternoon were $12 a week, and most of them spoke of earning 80 cents a day.

"I haven't always been in sympathy with the actions of some labor unions where trouble has been stirred up by a delegate who has to earn his pay, but when people are turned out of their homes I would be ashamed to stand here and not speak of it.

"It is a lasting stain on a country, a State and a city, to have such a thing happen, and if it is law, let us change the law. You would have felt better if the people had only made some resistance, but they took it all humbly without disturbance."

FIND MAN'S BODY IN WESTFIELD RIVER

WESTFIELD, Nov. 29.—The body of a man, said to be William Dolan, a stone mason of Pittsfield, was found in the Westfield River to-day. Patrick J. Mahoney identified the body as that of Dolan, who formerly worked for him. The body is that of a man about sixty years old, five feet and seven inches tall.

HOMELESS POLISH WOMAN AND CHILD

PARIS INSISTS DOG MEAT IS FOOD STAPLE

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The question, "Is dog meat fit and nourishing food for humans?" is causing wide discussion.

No one doubts that many poor persons in Paris eat the flesh of dogs. Occasionally a patron at some cheap restaurant has a suspicion that he is eating horse flesh or dog flesh disguised by a sauce of peculiar piquancy. Old Parisians remember the siege by the Germans when, with hunger as the sauce, dog meat was devoured greedily.

But now several persons have asked the authorities for permits to open slaughter houses for dogs in Paris, the flesh to be sold as food for human consumption. The applicants declare that the dogs they will deal in will be healthy and fattened for the market. Their proposition has raised loud protests.

Dr. de Gourmelles, a distinguished physician, president of the Anti-Vivisection Society of France, says dog flesh is not necessarily injurious to man if the dog is healthy when killed. But he reminds would-be dog butchers and consumers that a dog about to be killed may become intensely excited and that excitement will cause changes in the dog's flesh so that it may become poisonous when taken into the human system.

The same change sometimes happen in the flesh of the more placid and resigned cattle when they are led to slaughter. Dr. de Gourmelles urges furthermore that the price of dog meat must be so low it will not pay to fatten the animals for market.

CUTTER SEEKS BOSTON VESSEL

Captain Owen Collins of Dorchester complained to the Federal authorities that Captain Abner Leighton, skipper of the schooner M. L. Wetherell, took the vessel out of port without the owner's consent, and a United States revenue cutter has been sent from Newport to head him off. The Wetherell was obliged to put into Boston on account of the damage which she sustained in the Thanksgiving blow. The repairs made here were not sufficient, in the opinion of Captain Collins, to warrant her in sailing.

HARMON HEAD OF TICKET IN 1912

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 29.—Ex-Governor R. B. Glenn of North Carolina said in an interview here:

"Judson Harmon, Governor of Ohio, will be the next Presidential nominee of the Democratic party, in my judgment. Everywhere I have been I have found Harmon as the leading candidate in public and party opinion."

WOMAN TO SAVE M'KINLEY HOME

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 29.—The birthplace of the late William McKinley, located near Niles, which for several years has served as a shelter for tramps and is nearly a complete wreck, has been purchased by Miss Lulu E. Mackey, a member of the Trumbull county bar, and will be restored, the entire expense of the work to be borne by her. The house will be used as a historical museum.

CHRISTY SAYS HE WILL TAKE HIS WIFE BACK

ZANESVILLE, O., Nov. 29.—"Mrs. Christy is making a fool of herself through the newspapers," said Howard Chandler Christy, the artist, here. "I hope she will quit this, as it harms no one but herself. Personally I don't give three whoops what she says or does, but I do want her to act sensibly at least."

When asked if Mrs. Christy and himself would effect a reconciliation Christy said:

"That is entirely up to my wife. I love her and know that she loves me. The only wedge between us has been her family, which always 'butts in' and makes it unbearable for me.

"If she wants a reconciliation, why I presume we can arrange for it, but that will be privately and not in the public press, thank you. However, I'm going to fight for my daughter if Mrs. Christy tries to take her away from me."

A statement credited to the artist that he is going to tell of the life his wife led in New York, in his efforts to keep his ten-year-old daughter Natalie, roused Mrs. Christy to comment. "I don't know what they have poisoned his mind to say," Mrs. Christy remarked in New York. "There is nothing for him to tell about me. For eleven years I've clung loyally to him, and his friends know it. I've given up everything to make his home pleasant and bring happiness to him and little Natalie. Many told me to give him up, but I stuck through it all. A woman can be too loyal. I feel now, with this fresh calumny he has heaped on me, that I sacrificed more than he was worth.

"There are no 'famous artists' that he can mention to prove wrongdoing by me, nor any one else, and I will bring a hundred of our friends to Zanesville, if necessary, to clear my good name.

"I haven't mentioned any women's names, yet, in my fight to get my child," she added, emphasizing the "yet" so as to leave no doubt of her meaning, "but he may force me to.

"Howard had a little sense at one time, but the teachings of Mrs. Stetson have taken it all out of his mind. I blame the Christian Science teachings of Mrs. Stetson for all our trouble."

SECRETARY TO MRS. TAFT WILL MARRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The engagement of Miss Alice Blech, Mrs. Taft's social secretary, to Lieutenant Richard Wainwright, U. S. N., was announced to-day by her mother, Mrs. Paul Blech. The wedding will not take place until Spring. Miss Blech will retain her present position until the close of the social season. Lieutenant Wainwright is a son of Rear-Admiral Wainwright, who was executive officer of the Maine at the time of its destruction in Havana Harbor. Lieutenant Wainwright is on duty at the navy yard here.

SNIFF SOMEP'N BURNING? IT'S CHICAGO ROAST

Chicago, November 29.

The city of the striker,
The plunger and the piker;
The city of the stockyards and the hog, oh!
If there's anything on earth
To excite a person's mirth
It's a cinch that you will find it in Chicago!

—Ballads of the Knockers.

The only two bright spots in Chicago, which she calls gloomy, ugly, frightful, dirty and money mad, are the Lincoln monument in Lincoln Park and Hull House, according to Mrs. Gertrude Atherton of San Francisco, novelist, writer and world traveller. Hull House believes Miss Atherton does much to [illegible] Chicago, and she asserts Miss Jane Addams is the most wonderful woman in settlement work in the world.

"If I had to live in Chicago I would just as soon live in the slums as any place else; I see little choice.

"I am afraid to go out there at night. If it is necessary to venture out after sundown I leave every cent of money behind. No place in the world can compare to Chicago in its after dark wickedness.

"Chicago is not only bad in social conditions, but physically it is ugly. The only beautiful spot I have seen was the Lincoln monument. I did get a glimpse through the clouds of smoke of a beautiful facade on a downtown building, but it was so begrimed and in such inartistic environs that the effect was marred."

"But our residence districts," was feebly offered in defence.

This stirred only new words of condemnation.

"Those hideous houses of your rich along the lake front ruin all the natural beauty that nature has tried to to give to your city. They are positive blots. And those signs. Why are they not torn down?"

"But Chicago women, surely you will say they are beautiful?"

"Now, really, I can't say. Your women go along the streets so fast I have to dodge and keep out of their way, let alone watching for beauty. In the carriages and automobiles they seem so afraid of the smoke that they bundle up in yards and yards of veil.

"The streets? I have seen mountain trails in better condition. But you have Hull House, and that sends a great white light through the gloom."

FAMOUS RAIDER DEAD.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 29.—Captain Jesse T. Jamison, aged seventy-eight years, the pilot who guided the steamer Robert E. Lee from Cairo to St. Louis in her famous raid with the steamer Natchez forty years ago, is dead here following a stroke of paralysis on Thanksgiving Day. Captain Jamison was a native of Nashville, Tenn., but had resided here for over fifty years.

HE'S FOUND AT LAST! DR. COOK IS STILL WITH US, DESPITE RUMORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—He's found! Dr. Cook is discovered! The management of the Gramatan Inn in the Bronx announced to-day that the Arctic explorer is expected to take his rooms there again within three or four days. Messages for him were accepted there to-day. It is reported that Dr. Cook is taking the rest cure in a sanitarium.

But over in Brooklyn William L. Cook, the explorer's brother, told everything worth while about his distinguished brother except the exact street number.

"Dr. Cook is right here in New York to-day," said he. "I could call him up and get him on the telephone at this minute if I wanted to do so, but I don't want to disturb him."

"But H. Wellington Wack," it was suggested to Mr. Cook, "sent out a statement that he doctor had sailed to Europe on the Caronia."

"He's my brother's lawyer, isn't he?" asked Mr. Cook. "Well, I don't know anything about Mr. Wack, but if he thinks Dr. Cook went to Europe, he's wrong.

Would Blow Up Ship.

"Dr. Cook is in seclusion in New York, so that he can write his book in peace. He wants to be free to do that work, and he wants to avoid the conspirators who have not only threatened to destroy his records, but have threatened his life."

"Have you seen these letters?" Mr. Cook was asked.

"I saw letters threatening the doctor's life," was the answer. "There was another letter also sent to Dr. Cook, in which the conspirators against him threatened to blow up the ship on which his records were to be sent to Europe."

"Did you see that letter?"

"No, but Dr. Cook told me about it when it was delivered to him. Three threatening letters followed a letter which the doctor received some weeks ago. In this first letter some friends of the doctor told him of overhearing a conversation of organized conspirators in which they threatened to steal or destroy my brother's records."

Explorer in Good Health.

"Has Mrs. Cook gone abroad?" Mr. Cook was asked.

"No, Mrs. Cook is in the city, also," he said. "In fact, she'll be back in Bronxville by the end of the week, if not before that."

"Is the doctor ill?"

"No, he's in good health," his brother answered. "He just wants to get away and write his book."

"Isn't it true," Mr. Cook was asked, "that the doctor drew several thousand dollars from the Carnegie Trust Company a few days ago and closed his account there?"

"No, he didn't draw any cash from the Carnegie company," replied the doctor's brother. "Last week he did draw some kind of certificates from the bank, but not cash, and he hasn't closed his account."

LIGHT PUTS ON "TWEIFTH NIGHT"

Alexander Light, director of the Rialto Shakespearean company, graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory in the class of 1901, will present Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" in three acts at Chickering Hall, next Wednesday night, December 1, at 8.15.

Alexander Light will assume the part of Malvolio, also that of Sebastian. Madame Winifred Ames, with her charming and very inspiring elocution, will have the role of Countess Olivia. Miss Marial will take part of Viola. Miss Marial has very pleasing appearance and attractive personality.

COUNCIL TAKES UP APPEAL OF CHINESE

To-morrow the pardon committee of the Governor's Executive Council will go over the evidence in the case of Warry Charles and Joe Guey, two of the Chinamen convicted of murder for whom a pardon is sought. It is not thought likely that the committee will reach a decision to-morrow, but it is likely the committee will be ready to report when the Council meeting is held on Wednesday.

BIDS FOR BIG FIGHT TO BE OPENED WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—December 1 may come and December 1 may go in New York, but it will not see the opening of the bids for the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Commissioner of Police Baker has reared up on his hind legs and gently but firmly informed the gentlemen connected with the proposed Madison Square Garden athletic show, of which the opening of the bids was to have been a part, that he did not intend that they should flub-dub about with the law of the State of New York. Accordingly the managers who are scurrying about with bids have decided that Meyers's Hotel, Hoboken, N. J., will be a suitable place. Eleven o'clock in the morning is the time set.

The introduction of checks covering a portion of the guarantee, or the fact that they were publicly auctioneering for the chance to gain control of this all-important fistic attraction, was construed by Commissioner Baker as being a direct slap at the law of New York, which says that any person or persons aiding or abetting a prize fight shall be liable to arrest and imprisonment.

The men interested with the Jeffries end of that athletic show asked the commissioner as a last resort if he objected to the public reading of the terms and articles after they had been worked out in private. He requested them not to do anything of the sort, but added by way of encouragement that he would not frown upon the athletic treat if they sparred along the lines pursued by both Jeffries and Johnson at the several music halls in which they have appeared.

The fight will probably go to the Pacific coast. That much seems certain to-day. The biggest bonafide bids have been received from the slope promoters, and the five men from the far West who are here to be on hand when the bids are opened December 1 will without doubt produce the winner.

Jim Coffroth of San Francisco is looked on as the most probable bidder, having managed many big contests. Jack Gleason and Eddie Graney of San Francisco, Tex Rickard of Nevada and Tom McCarey of Los Angeles are on the job.

Jack Johnson isn't ready to meet Sam Langford yet, unless Sam can see and is willing to take the rough end of a gigantic gamble. Johnson and his manager, George Little, said last night that they would fight Langford on one condition: He must bet $10,000 even on the issue. Johnson said:

"It would be a bad business arrangement to take Langford on now. Why should he howl so loud. Just at this time, the eve of my greatest ring battle, the public want a Johnson-Jeffries fight, not a Langford-Johnson bout. Langford had every opportunity to cover the original $5,000 placed with the New York American, but he didn't even say he was going to cover my money."

Here's the latest claimant to a fight with Jim Jeffries—Al Kubiak. The big Michigander is ready to sail from Paris on Wednesday and according to dispatches received to-day has a contract to meet Jeffries in a six-round bout before the National Athletic Club of Philadelphia. Kubiak has been taking in a little of the French coin while the boxing craze has been on in Paris.

JOE JEANNETTE RED HOT AFTER SAM LANGFORD

While Joe Woodman is howling for a fight, Dan McKettrick, manager of that fearless chocolate drop, Joe Jeannette, is howling for a scrap in Paris. He writes the following to a London paper, and it might require an answer from Joe. Here's what Honest Dan writes: "Woodman was offered a good inducement to match Langford with Jeannette for a match in Paris.

"What did the great and only Langford answer? This: 'Get me John Willie, or someone else.'

"That hardly shows that he is ready to meet the world, does it? Now, M. Victor Breyer is prepared to offer Langford a match with Jeannette, and what is more, at terms that are far and away above the amount of money he receives for boxing in America—more than he received for boxing and quitting cold to Jeannette.

Refused to Leave Corner.

"I might add that Langford was defeated by Jeannette in eight rounds, and, what is more, it was an inglorious defeat for Langford. The "great and only" refused to leave his corner for the ninth round, stating that he had had enough. They boxed again in New York, and Langford dropped Jeannette cold several times in the first three rounds, but Jeannette kept boxing as hard as he could, and the great Langford was backing and side stepping before the end of the sixth session, and Joe earned a draw.

"Then they went to Boston for a twelve-round contest or, to be more exact, the match in Boston preceded the one in New York. At any rate it was a twelve-round contest, and was declared a draw, and all the papers of the country, including the Associated Press, declared it a 'Boston decision,' which means a victory for the home man, as is what happens in nine contests out of ten in that section. The unbiased newspaper men and those who sign their articles said it was 'robbery.' New York declared that the referee was influenced by the betting, and that Jeannette was a winner by a mile.

"We were offered another contest in Boston just before we came across and I agreed to take the date provided the club would increase the distance to fifteen rounds and have some well known New England sportsman, not connected with the club, as referee. This they agreed to do and when it was put up to Langford he refused to go over twelve rounds.

Can Prove His Class.

"Now, Langford can prove his class by accepting a contest with Jeannette, and there is no reason for him to side step, for he can obtain more money than he would receive at home. All that is asked is that he go twenty-five rounds, and if he so desires he can box winner to take all.

"That is what I think of Langford against Jeannette, and it is now a case of him agreeing to box or to stop touting himself as the world's champion, which he never will be while Johnson and Jeannette are in the game."

EDDIE GRANEY GOING STRONG AFTER FIGHT

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Eddie Graney, 'Frisco referee and politician, is to-day speeding on to New York, where he will figure in the bidding for the Jeffries-Johnson battle.

Graney, in passing through Chicago, dropped a few interesting points. Eddie is pretty certain he can land the bout, and if successful will hold it in the heart of 'Frisco and bill it for forty-five rounds.

Graney is a warm personal friend of the newly elected Mayor and declares he has been assured that if he landed the match he can go through with his plans.

Graney carries a certified check for $5,000 in his pocket to guarantee his good faith.

"I am going after this fight and going after it strong. I believe the coast is the logical place for holding it, and San Francisco is the logical city. If the battle comes to me the fans won't have to go outside the city to see the match. It will be held right under their noses," said Graney.

BIDS $60,000 FOR PICTURES OF BIG FIGHT

Another golden apple has been offered Jeffries and Johnson. This time it is a deal on the moving pictures of the coming battle that will insure them a fortune, no matter how the fight goes or where it is held.

A representative of the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance arrived from the West and he is ready to make a tremendous bid for the right to take the pictures of the battle. He will offer the fighters $60,000 and 30 per cent. of the gross receipts for this privilege. He has brought credentials with him to show the offer is bona fide, and he is ready to put up the whole amount—$60,000—as soon as the deal is made. He will make no bid at all for the fight itself. It is simply a moving picture deal.

In a way this struggle to secure the picture rights will be as interesting as the efforts of the various promoters to secure the contest. The Moving Picture Trust has been making strenuous efforts to land the plumb. The independents are out to beat the trust, and their gameness is shown in the matter by their willingness to risk such an amount as $60,000. The 30 per cent. of the gross the fighters can split any way they like.

CYCLONE BURNS TO TACKLE RUSSIAN

Cyclone Burns, who has not been seen in action in this city for quite a little time, will face Harry Titovsky, the new Russian marvel, in a catch-as-catch-can bout at the Columbia Wednesday night and something of a lively order is expected, for Cyclone is always there with the gingery goods. His opponent is just as peppery and fiery as the Cyclone and is said to possess considerable more strength, so that when the two clash there will be excitement galore on tap from the sound of the gong.

Although Cyclone has not been around this vicinity much of late, he has not been idle for he has been on the rampage in the Canadian provinces and in the Middle West, meeting and defeating all comers. He is in Boston for a few weeks and is anxious to meet Pereifi, Willoughby and other top-notchers and will undoubtedly be given plenty of opportunity, providing, of course, he disposes of Titovsky.

PHILLIES NOT IN CONTROL OF LEAGUE SYNDICATE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—The newly elected president of the Philadelphia club, Horace Fogel, announces that the Phillies are independent so far as the control of Charles Murphy of the Chicago Cubs is concerned, and that the rumors of the Phillies being controlled by a syndicate is unfounded.

Now that the change in the local club has aroused the some antagonism between the American and National leagues baseball interest has been greatly aroused in this burg.

It is realized that with the new president favoring the election of John M. Ward, the veteran player, for president of the National League, who is also Charles Murphy's candidate, has created some strong feeling against the local club, and there is a difference of opinion expressed in the action of the new leader.

President Fogel said to-day:

"The name of Charles Webb Murphy has been mentioned and the subject of syndicate baseball has been dragged in. I made the statement that Murphy had nothing to do with my purchase of the club, and I repeat that he has nothing whatever to do with it. He hasn't got a dollar in the club and he will have nothing to do with the management or control of it.

"As for syndicate baseball I have always been opposed to it, and I don't propose to stand for it now. The Philadelphia club will be managed as a purely business proposition and in an honest effort to give Philadelphia a winning ball team.

"It has also been suggested that I would vote for John Montgomery Ward for president of the National League. I have not declared myself on that point because all who know me know that I have the most sincere admiration for John Heydler, who was a newspaper man like myself."

WAR BETWEEN BAN JOHNSON AND CHARLES MURPHY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Baseball experts to-day declared that it is open war and no quarters in the fight between Ban Johnson and Charles W. Murphy. The American League they say is behind Johnson solidly and a fight to a finish that may result in their extermination of the National League, according to some of the participants, is one possible outcome.

Murphy, the Chicago magnate, is opposed to John A. Heydler, and Johnson is trying to prevent the naming of John M. Ward as Heydler's successor. Garry Herrmann and Johnson are close together. Herrmann says that Heydler, as long as he is in the race, will get the Cincinnati Club's vote. Herrmann and Barney Dreyfuss, it is said, feel that Johnson and the American League are behind them and are prepared for a line up against the Murphy forces.

The Herrman forces seem to include Boston and St. Louis as well as Cincinnati and Pittsburg. Murphy has Chicago and Philadelphia.

John T. Brush is favorable toward Ward, but says he is not pledged to vote against Heydler. C. H. Ebbets of Brooklyn is for the ex-New York manager. Therefore Heydler's election seemed to be a matter of one vote. Herrmann and Dreyfuss, it is pointed out, could resign from the National League with their four clubs and start a new major league.

PIRATE FANS UP IN ARMS OVER RUMORS

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—There is turmoil among the fans in Smoketown over the rumor that the team would be shifted into the American League. Rather than see the National League champions in a syndicate league the fans would prefer to become a member of the American organization where such a thing is not allowed.

The impulsive fans who advocate this have heard that the new purchase of the Philadelphia club may swing the balance of power to the enemies of the Pittsburg magnate and result in the election of a president other than Heydler, to whom Dreyfuss has been committed.

They also understand that in such event the Pittsburg club may not be allowed to retain the recognition in the league to which it has been accustomed and to which its prominence in baseball would seem to entitle it.

There was a rumor that Dreyfuss and Herrmann had consulted over the likelihood of quitting the National for the American in case of too bad a break in New York at the National league meeting, but this is denied by the Pittsburg club here as well as by Hermann at Cincinnati.

WEDNESDAY—George Alger vs. Billy Nixon, Apollo A. C., Salem.

THURSDAY—Jim Jeffries vs. Sam Berger, and Frank Gotch vs. Doc Roller, Armory A. A. Phil McGovern vs. Young Zieringer, Pittsburg. Amateur show, Riverside Boat Club, Cambridge.

SATURDAY—Jerry Moskill vs. Joe Murphy, Portland, Me. Bouts at National A. C., Philadelphia.

It's a bangup card the National A. C. will furnish its boxing members to-night as that South Boston idol, Eddie Murphy, stacks up with Young Loughrey, the tough Quaker, who never knows when he is beaten.

These boys are so evenly matched that the "dopesters" find it hard picking the winner. Murphy has been resting for some time. He went to Northboro about ten days ago to condition himself at Harry Gath's, and to-day feels better than he ever felt before. Loughrey has performed in this city before. On each occasion he has more than made good. From the clang of the first bell he starts and never lets up. He is one of the most aggressive boxers that ever climbed through the ropes. The harder he is hit, the more vicious and the more he tears in.

The semi-final between George Alger and Kid McDonald will make a good setto. Alger is clever. McDonald is a stiff puncher. Both boys keep busy all the time. The opening bout will introduce Mike Maylia and Joe Burns. Those boys recently put up a slashing good bout at Salem.

HUESTON, POOL CHAMP, TO MEET ALL COMERS

LEW POWELL, 10 TO 6 FAVORITE OVER AD WOLGAST TO-NIGHT

By TAD.

Lew Powell, the crack California lightweight, gets his first chance in what we might term first-class company to-night in the Golden Gate town. He is hooked up with Ad Wolgast for a twenty-round spell, and betting on the affair is brisker than it has been since a real championship go was pulled off.

Powell is no spring chicken in the fighting game, you must remember. He was boxing amateur bouts out there when such stars as Jimmy Britt, Al Neil, Eddie Hanlon, Frankie Neil and Al Kaufman appeared. Lew was the bashful kind, however, and never took on a professional go until long after the others started. In the last year or two he has blossomed out and gone through the bunch like a golf ball through a window.

His wins over Young Erne, Kid Harrison, Johnny Frayne and Cyclone Thompson has set the fans there wondering, and now they'll bet nuggets that Lew will clean both Welch and Nelson.

He is a tow-headed youth with extremely strong jaws, a la Nelson, square shoulders and a remarkable reach. Unlike the new school of boxers, Powell stands up straight in the ring. He has a right hand uppercut that is second to none, and the writers in Frisco say that Johnson's famous punch is not a bit fiercer.

Al Kaufman, Jimmy Coffroth and Billy Roche, three men who know Powell well, think him a cinch over Wolgast. Coffroth cleaned up $1,500 when Lew beat Frayne, and is going to this bout just as strong.

Wolgast, the Milwaukee lad who meets Powell Monday night, has some record himself, having won from Henri Piet, the champion of France, in two rounds. It took Freddie Welch twelve rounds to beat Piet, and then the frogeater had to stop on account of a bum ankle. Wolgast also won a newspaper decision over Battling Nelson at Los Angeles not so long ago. New Yorkers remember him as the lad who surprised Owen Moran here at the National Club last year. His style is awfully awkward. He crouches as Eddie Hanlon did, crowding his man and shooting his left out from the crouch with the speed of a lightning bolt. Moran didn't know what to make of Wolgast for four or five rounds. He was worried, jolted and outfought up to that time. He solved the crouch, however, after a bit and outpointed the little fellow. At that Moran outweighed his man by a great deal, but Wolgast gave him a terrific struggle while they were together.

Upon arriving in Frisco, Wolgast told the newspaper men that if he didn't put Powell away in three rounds he would be an awfully disappointed young man. Cyclone Thompson, who lost to Powell on a foul, tipped Wolgast off to the fact that Powell was weak in the midriff, and if he socked a few there Lew would flop and listen to the numbers.

"I've never been knocked off my feet in my life," said Wolgast, "and believe me I can stand and swap with the best of them without fear of a tumble. After I beat Powell I want Abe Attell and Battling Nelson. Just get me these two fellows and I'll polish them off to the queen's taste, one after the other."

With all this record and confidence displayed by Wolgast, the Westerners are making Powell a favorite, and from the latest reports we learn that Lew is still 10 to 6, with plenty of money to come.

TY COBB KEEPS ENTIRE BASEBALL TEAM BUSY

Any time that Tyrus Cobb, the Detroit demon, gets on first base there is a battle of wits.

For Cobb is not one of those fellows who stand on the bag and give thanks for having reached it in safety. Not Tyrus. The moment that he touches it he has devised some scheme for getting to second.

And here is no pleasant chin music between Tyrus and the first baseman. Not much. The moment the fleet outfielder hits that bag the first baseman and every infielder on his team and the catcher and the pitcher get busy with their "think tanks" in an effort to hold Tyrus there.

Dangerous After Passing First.

For once beyond first he becomes doubly dangerous. Then a hit, an error, sometimes an infield play and away scampers Tyrus over the plate, and your ball game is gone.

So there are no pleasantries when Tyrus reaches first. But it remained for George Moriarity, now his pal, to keep Tyrus standing on first when he had innumerable chances to go to second.

Clark Griffith tells the story.

"George and Tyrus are great friends now," is the way the Cincinnati fox prefaces his story.

But there was a time when they were not. That was when Moriarity was playing first base for the New York Yankees. Now this Moriarity is about as quick witted an Irishman as you ever saw. He's game as a pebble.

All Ready to "Rap" Cobb.

"Any time a ball player goes up as rapidly as Cobb did the ball players like to take a fall out of him. Not because of anger or anything of that sort, but it won't do for any youngster to get the impression that he is the only star on the field.

"Well, we went to Detroit. 'Now I want you to keep this fellow Cobb hugging first base,' I said to Moriarity. I was the manager of the Yanks then.

"'Aye, aye, sir,' answered Moriarity.

"'I won't tell you how to do it, for the simple reason that I don't know. But you do it.'

"'Leave it to me,' said Moriarity.

"Well, Tyrus got on the first time. He had scarcely rounded the bag until Moriarity began on him. He roasted Cobb to a turn. Ty came right back. It was the worst jawing match you ever heard. Jennings was howling his head off at Ty. But it did no good. Ty still knew that he was in a ball game and he kept from being caught off the bag, but he was so interested in his verbal battle that he made no attempt to steal and never got beyond first.

"The next time up he hit safely. But before he had reached the bag Moriarity was after him. I strolled out that way and heard Moriarity challenging him to fight a duel. Well, you can bet that Cobb was just scrappy enough to be interested and what they promised to do to one another when they met on the field of honor chased the chills up and down my back.

"Cobb that afternoon got on base four times. But he didn't make an attempt to steal. Moriarity kept him so interested that he didn't have time."

You may have read the official record of baseball, but did you ever hear the record breaking performance that did not reach the books.

Umpires O'Laughlin, Evans, Klem and Johnstone were fanning during the world's series. They were surrounded by a group of players that included both Pirates and Tigers. Also Jack Nelson, an old time pitcher.

Umpires in Fanning Bee.

"They tell me that Dutch Carter, the old Yale pitcher, holds the record for consecutive strikeouts," said Silk. "Red Donahue says that in a game in New York city twelve or fourteen years ago he struck out the first fourteen men to face him."

"I had a catcher once who beat all records for consecutive passed balls," remarked Nelson. "He had seven in a row."

"Yes," interposed Mullin. "And a little pitcher named Crede Bates holds the record for wildness. He pitched in Cleveland in 1880 and gave sixteen bases on balls."

"But did you ever hear the story of Honest John Kelley?" queried Nelson.

They never had, of course. "Well, it was back in the days of the old American Association and the game was played in the old union grounds in Allegheny.

"Casey was pitching for the Athletics and Galvin for Pittsburg. Honest John Kelley was the umpire. The inning was the ninth.

Scores Home Run.

"The score was 5 to 0 in favor of the Athletics and the darkness was gathering rapidly. The first Pittsburg man up slammed a home run drive over the fence.

"Then the Athletics demanded that the game be called on account of darkness. To make the bluff strong the outfielders stood still and made no effort to get the smash, claiming they could not see the ball.

"The players gathered about the plate and a big argument was started.

"'I'll tell you,' said Kelley. 'I'll go out in centre field and you fellows bat me some flies,' he said.

"And he did. He went out there, caught half a dozen line drives and high ones and ordered the game continued. Also the game lasted long enough to permit the Pittsburg team to start a batting rally and win that game by the count of 6 to 5."

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

LIVE ONES DIE HARD, AND THERE are some who were once live ones who will never know they are dead ones until the procession walks slow behind them. Even then if you'd walk up and ask them about it, they wouldn't have a word to say. All this leads up to the fact that Ancient Robert Fitzsimmons still believes he's on Earth. Fitz is billed to fight Bill Lang on December 27, for the heavyweight champion of Australia, the fight to take place in Sydney. Bob is within two years of the half century mark and I'm wondering if they have no respect for old age or no anti-cruelty laws over there. The old war-horse is so sure of winning that he is threatening to meet all comers, and speaks of a bout with Tommy Burns. In a letter to a Boston friend, Fitz says:

"After I have whipped this fellow I am going to make a tour of Australia and meet all comers. If Tommy Burns wants a fight he can have one. I am in perfect health, good and strong, and have just as much cleverness and can hit just as hard as I ever could."

HERE IS A LETTER FROM A MAN who appears to me to have figured out an angle of the football game which would help to do away with a lot of the talk which has hurt the sport. Read it. It listens well:

Straight Dope, Boston American:

I have read your valued column daily since you started it and am heartily in accord with nearly all the sentiments which you have expressed therein. Of course, it is hard to become reconciled to the fact that you have an antipathy for the great game of football, but you have handled the subject so well in spite of that fact that I admire you all the more for it.

I am a great believer in the game and want to see it continue as it is at present. I cannot help feeling, however, that the colleges are adopting a very dangerous method of procedure as things are now being done. I refer to the matter of issuing incorrect statements regarding the physical condition of the various players.

It is certain that football does not stand in very strong among certain classes of people (largely among those who never saw a game) —I am not knocking you now—and these fake reports of water on the knee or blood-clot on the lung do not tend to strengthen the hold of the game of the populace at large, who have no knowledge of the true facts in the case.

It is rather hard to put up an argument for the game and have some one tell you that such-and-such a player was desperately injured in practice, when the facts are that he is merely theoretically injured that the betting odds may be held up. This certainly begins to smack of a New York horse race.

I hope the colleges may soon come to an understanding and cut out this absolutely senseless procedure and pay more attention to developing plays which will add to the interest in the game. Yours very truly,

A. M. JOHNSON.

No. 39 Woodbine street.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir: Being a constant reader of your valuable column, I thought I would take the liberty of asking you to print this in your dope. I have a hockey team composed solely of Canadians and would like to enter the city league this winter if there is one. They are all clever players and in their respective towns are considered among the best that chase rubber discs. Now that they are putting up a rink I presume that they will have a league and want some good teams in it. I think if we are accepted in it we will make things interesting and show you people how they play hockey in Canada. I would also like to know how to reach the manager of the Arena and how many and who are the teams in the inter-collegiate league. Hoping to see this in print and that it won't take up too much space in your valuable column, I remain Yours truly,

CANUCK.

Hockey, to my way of thinking is one of the greatest of Winter sports, and there is little doubt that a league will be formed when the new rink is completed. I am not able to give you the name of the manager of the rink, or what teams will play in the league, but I'll make inquiries.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

In a poker game, six-handed, namely, A, B, C, D, E, F, the dealer deals the cards. It is a jack pot. A passes, B opens, C stays, D looks and finds he has only four cards, asks to have a new deal. Is he right or wrong? Kindly answer this in the Old Sport column. Thanking you in advance. Yours in luck,

A BUNCH OF B. B.

Malden.

When D picks up his hand containing but four cards, the hand falls dead. He loses his interest in the pot and the others play it out. Nothing doing on his demand for a new deal.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—Please let me know at your earliest convenience the decisions of the bouts between George Gardner and Bob Fitzsimmons and oblige. Yours truly, PUSSY DWYER.

Taunton, Mass.

Fitz won in twenty rounds in the only bout they ever had, according to my dope book. It was held in San Francisco November 25, 1903.

BILL SANDS, DORCHESTER, MASS.—You've got the right dope, Bill, although you don't know it. You say your boy weighs 145 pounds and can train down to fight some of these 95 pounders. That's the way a lot of them figure it, and if you can get by without getting your scrapper on the scales, maybe you can get some matches with the little fellow and turn up a winner.

MORRIS, BOSTON.—A DOES NOT hold a dead hand simply because he miscalled it. The hand shows for itself, regardless of any side talk. I can't figure out where you boys get any license to play poker. You know about enough of the game to play old maid or muggins.

J. D. A., BOSTON.—IT LOOKS TO ME as if B wins the bet, if he has the money on deposit in a bank, and the wager was that he could not show a certain amount or its equivalent. Money in the bank is certainly the equivalent of money in your pocket and a whole lot safer for youngsters who have a tendency to bet.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Having read your dope for a long time, I am going to ask you to put this in your paper. The Rambler basketball team of South Framingham has a few open dates and would like to arrange games away from home with 130-pound teams. Address J. Sleeper, 46 Clinton street, South Framingham, Mass.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—I wish to have it announced through your column that the team which was defeated on November 18 by the Notre Dames at South Boston was not the Fenno Five, as was reported, but a picked team. The Fenno Five were scheduled to play the Baldwins at South Boston on December 2, but this game has been cancelled by the Baldwin management because of the report of the defeat of the Fenno Five by the Notre Dames. Managers desiring to book the Fenno Five may do so by addressing Frank W. Johnson, Mattapan, Mass.

CUE EXPERTS ARE BUNCHED

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—There is a possibility of a triple tie for first honors, cup and money, in the international billiard championship, which will be concluded this week in the Madison Square Garden concert hall. The standing of the six players now is:

Name.	Won.	Lost.
Cline	4	1
Demarest	3	1
Sutton	3	1
Slosson	1	2
Cassignol	1	[illegible]
Cutler	0	[illegible]

Sutton is to meet Cassignol this afternoon and Demarest will play Slosson tonight. Should Sutton and Demarest win their games they will be tied with Cline, who has won four of his five scheduled games and is sure of a substantial cash prize.

"LONG SHOT" COX IN ODD SHOW RING SALE

They tell a good ringside story of the New York sale in which Auctioneer George Bain and Trainer Walter Cox are the principals. It seems that Walter Cox was showing a Shetland pony in the ring for someone. It can be imagined that the long-legged New Hampshire trainer made a funny spectacle doubled up behind the diminutive piece of horseflesh. It was but natural that Walter should have received an unmerciful kidding from the side-lines, but he never cracked a smile and gave the little chap as much attention as though he was out to win a futurity.

When the outfit was brought up in front of the auctioneer's stand the pony brought $125. The trap and the harness were put up and brought small sums.

"How much am I offered for the driver?" asked Bain. The bids ranged from 30 cents to $50,000. "Well," said Walter, "I was always told that anything that was worth doing at all was worth doing well."

HORSEMEN TO AWARD PRIZES

Unless busy the Fellsway Driving Club feel lonesome. They are built that way. While the racing season is at an end, yet that is no known reason why the members should not keep hustling.

For this week the card is laid out that on Tuesday evening will be awarded the prizes won during the Summer at Combination Park. Newcomb Hall, in Somerville, will be the scene of the offerings, and to properly celebrate the occasion, there will be a collation, music and dancing, which, of course, means that the ladies will have a hand in the proceedings.

Wednesday evening the club gets busy again in having Representative S. H. Keene address the members on boulevards. It is likely that he will show there is no reason why the boulevards cannot in part be allowed to the owners of horse-drawn vehicles, as well as entirely to automobiles.

Then, not to be backward, on Friday evening the women will meet to organize an auxiliary to the Fellsway Driving Club. Indications point that this is no unimportant matter in the future welfare of the horsemen, as in the past season the women have worked equally as hard as the members in causing the lease of Columbia Park to have been a success.

JEFFRIES COMES HERE THIS WEEK

We shall be able to see for ourselves just what Jeffries's condition is at present, for the white heavyweight champion will be here to appear Thursday night at the Armory A. A. in an athletic entertainment, and will box a few rounds with his sparring partner, Sam Berger.

Jeff will be asked to say something about the battle with Johnson from the ring, and while he is heated up after the exercise with Berger he may express himself more strongly than ever.

BIG PURSE FOR JEFFRIES AND JOHNSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The mails are getting heavy with the bids for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, which will be opened on Wednesday as per schedule.

The latest big noise comes from Montana. The Great Falls Athletic Club of the copper region comes through with an offer of $115,000, and the purse is announced in all seriousness. The stipulation is also made that ample police protection will be given and the approval of the authorities may easily be obtained.

One word from the fight managers, and the promoters will begin immediately to build the arena. Some business to that.

The bid to be accepted from any club will have to be in six figures is the consensus of opinion among the experts, and the two fighters probably think the same way, too, since the bids that have come to light mostly reached to that size.

BIG BENEFIT FOR STUBBS

On Wednesday evening at the Hub Billiard Palace, will occur three of the most interesting games of three-cushion caroms ever held in Boston's famous billiard hall. The occasion will be in the nature of a benefit for one of the best three cushion and pool players in New England, William Stubbs.

Suffering from an incurable disease, and given no hope by the consulting doctors; forced to try another climate, in far-off Denver; broke, and in great need of financial aid, the ever generous Hub owners have placed at his disposal the use of the match billiard table for his exhibition on that evening.

The games will be twenty-five points each between Charles Thresher and Stubbs, Bennie Laurie and Stubbs, and the last twenty-five points between the champion Tom Hueston and George Carter.

Stubbs at one time was the three-cushion champion of New England, having won the honor by defeating such players as Ben Laurie, Harry Manuel, A. G. Cutler and Harry Cline; the two latter are now engaged in the 18-2 balk line championship tournament of the world at New York.

GOLF GOSSIP CLUB NOTES

One of the largest fields of golfers that ever turned out at this season of the year for a tournament was on hand Saturday, at Wollaston, when thirty turned in cards. T. R. Fuller, the former State champion, is to be congratulated on his fine card of seventy-seven, for scoring of this kind is seldom done at this time of year.

It would have been hard to find a classier group of semi-finalists in a national event than the four who played at Lakewood last week. Walter J. Travis and Jerome D. Travers, two former national amateur champions, and Fred Herreshoff and Findlay Douglas, who are rated in the Metropolitan district among the best. Travis and Herreshoff went through to the finals, where the youngster got back at the old man for the two severe beatings Travis had administered in other meetings they had run up against each other in during the past year.

S. E. Thayer, who captured low net at Woodland last Saturday, had a very good card of eighty-three for his round. Thayer has been nursing a sore foot for some time that has kept him away from his favorite sport, in some degree, and this was one reason why he did not take part in the Rover meeting held recently over the Woodland course.

A. Maurice Crosby, a young Harvard golfer who belongs to Chestnut Hill, was awarded the prize in the ringer cup contest in this club with his total of fifty-seven. Ringer cup contests are good fun and furnish more cards from the members than any other competition and every club in the State would do well to have a trophy up for competition in a contest of this sort.

Brae Burn eventually will lose their tenth and eleventh holes and in preparation for this time, they have started to get the sort of marshland that is at the right of the present ninth fairway into condition. The change will not hurt the present course and no distance will be lost because of this large piece of land that has hitherto been uncared for and has served for a hazard for sliced shots going to the last hole of the outward journey.

The changes on this course, when they are completed, will be an improvement according to the way some people think, for golfers as a rule do not like to do any amount of walking between green and tee as is the case when you have to stroll two hundred yards from the tenth green in order to get started for the next hole.

COVERS MILE IN 54 4-5 SEC.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 29.—The mile record for motor cycles, 54 4-5 seconds, was broken by W. G. Collins on a seven-horsepower machine. His time was 53 4-5 seconds.

HARVARD SOCCER TEAM TO PLAY

The Harvard Association football eleven opens its official season on Wednesday at Springfield with a game against the fast training school eleven. Harvard is this year to play more trial games than in years past, in preparation for the intercollegiate season, which opens in March. Paul Brooks, last year's captain, is out of the team this season, and Leland, the pick of last year's forward line and, with the exception of Captain Brooks, the best man on the team, takes his place.

NEW RECORD FOR HURLING STONE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Martin J. Sheridan of the Irish-American Athletic Club, made a world's record with the forty-two-pound stone, which he hurled 27 feet ½ inch, four inches better than the mark set by James Mitchell many years ago. The record was made at Celtic Park, L. I., at the games of the Irish Volunteers.

After the throw the stone was weighed by A. A. U. officials, who found it to be considerably over forty-two pounds. These officials said the record undoubtedly will stand.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

"Begin Now" Is Best Motto for Success

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

A SOUL immortal, Time, God everywhere,
Without, within—how can a heart despair,
Or talk of failure, obstacles and doubt?
(What proofs of God? The little seeds that sprout,
Life and the solar system and their laws,
Nature? Ah, yes; but what was Nature's cause?)

All mighty words are short. God, life and death;
War, peace and truth are uttered in a breath,
And briefly said are love and will and time;
Yet in them lies a majesty sublime.

Love is the vast constructive power of space;
Time is the hour which calls it into place;
Will is the means of using time and love,
And bringing forth the heart's desires thereof.

The way is love, the time is now and will
The patient method. Let this knowledge fill
Thy consciousness, and fate and circumstance,
Environment, and all the ills of chance
Must yield before the concentrated might
Of those three words, as shadows yield to light.

Go charge thyself with love; be infinite
'Tis from free sowing that full harvest springs;
Love God and life and all created things.

Learn time's great value; to this mandate bow,
The hour of opportunity is Now.
Let the swift arrows of thy wishes go.
Though sent into the distance and the dark,
The dawn shall prove thy arrows hit the mark.

THE days, weeks, months and years are flying like Time's express trains down the track of earth, whatever you want to do, whatever you wish you could do, BEGIN NOW.

You would not have this deep and persistent desire unless the power was in you to do it.

The only thing for you to consider is whether it is a real desire, a real need, based on good reasons and common sense. Sometimes we long to do and be things which are not consistent with reason and sense.

To do, or be, them would mean to sacrifice principle to give up something more precious than that which we long to possess.

The young wife, the young mother, with love in her home, who longs to be a great actress, or prima donna, could not obtain her desire, however much talent and industry she gave to that end, without sacrificing dear, and true, and sweet things.

She has taken the wifely vows; she has brought an immortal soul into existence and her first duty accomplished will eventually mean her greatest joy.

Nothing the world can offer could repay her for putting aside husband and child, or leaving their interests to the care of others. But if you are a young woman, with your heart free and your life before you, and you believe you possess ability in any special line, if you are a young man and feel great longing to achieve something, BEGIN TO-DAY.

To-morrow take another step, and the next day another.

Believe in the invincible power of that great trinity, Love, Time and Will.

Love your work.

If your present employment is not agreeable to you, LOVE IT OUT OF THE WAY!

Go about it with a persistent purpose to FINISH IT, and to make way for something better.

Think of it as a stair on which you will mount to the tower of your dreams.

Rise every morning with the determination to do your work well and cheerfully; but with the fixed idea in your mind that it is leading you to the end of that task, and to the beginning of a new experience.

Just before you fall asleep, think of the work you want to do; ask your immortal self to open the way for that other work, and ask the invisible Helpers to aid you. THEY WILL. You cannot fail.

The Danger Line

According to Statistics in the Fifth Year of Married Life There Are More Divorces Than in Any Other Year

By Dorothy Dix

TO the casual observer of the unhappy married, it always seems that the family quarrel is like death in that it has all times and seasons for its own, and that a mismated couple are equally liable, anywhere between the altar and the grave, to make a rush to the divorce court.

It appears that this view of the subject is erroneous. According to the National League for the Protection of the Family, which has been collecting statistics on the subject of divorce, the fifth year of married life is the danger line in matrimony, and a great many more people get divorced during that time than any other.

In a word, the fifth year of marriage is the psychological period during which, for most people, the question is decided of whether marriage is a failure or not. It is a time of stress and peril, but if a couple weather it successfully they are reasonably sure of a safe and happy domestic voyage the balance of the way.

We do not have to seek far to find why this should be true, and why the fifth year of marriage should be a time of unusual danger.

The first explanation that suggests itself is that it marks the setting of the honeymoon, and the dawn of real married life, the metamorphosis of the lover into the husband, and the sweetheart into the wife.

When the Disappointments Come

Up to then the rapture of possession, the piquant interest of exploring each other's character, the novelty of establishing a home as one's own, the wonder and the joy of first parenthood, keep all except the most incongruously mismated and uncongenial husband and wife together.

So far marriage has been a gay adventure, but by the time the fifth year rolls around the gilt has begun to wear off of the gingerbread. Satiety has superseded sentiment. Husband and wife have taken the measure of each other, and the result has been more or less disappointing. The home is no longer a plaything. It has become a treadmill where one is condemned to do life service. All of the pink chiffons of romance have been stripped away from matrimony, and a man and woman face the long, hard pull of existence with a yoke fellow who does not always pull square, and who often has a vicious temper.

What wonder, under the circumstances, that many a man's and woman's courage falls and that they flee to the divorce courts?

Another reason why the fifth year of married life is one of unusual danger is because it takes just about that long for the man and woman who have made a mistake in picking out their life partner to reach the point of complete disillusioning, and to realize the utter futility of the belief that all young people cherish, that they can make over a husband or wife to their liking.

The Mistakes of Both

It is then, when a woman of great heart and soul blunders into marriage with a man utterly unworthy of her, or the man who is fine and noble finds out that the wife he has picked out is nothing but a sawdust doll, that the greatest danger comes from affinities. For it is a dreary thing to think about dragging out an existence in a marriage where one is tied hand and foot to a dead love and a dead illusion.

Undoubtedly another thing that makes the fifth year of marriage one of great hazard is that so many women are so absorbed in holding the baby's hands that they forget that some other woman may be holding the husband's, and so many men become so obsessed by their business that they lose sight of the fact that their wives are still young and pretty women, with a woman's necessity to be fed on tenderness and flattery.

A final reason why the fifth year of married life is so full of danger is that both men and women are generally young enough at that time to still yearn for the impossible, and to believe that somewhere with some one they can find a domesticity in which the thrill never dies. They lack the age and experience to accept life as it is, to realize that there are no earthly angels, and that we could not exist at a high tension of romance any more than we could upon a steady diet of overspiced food.

"Forewarned is forearmed," says the old proverb, and the mere fact that statistics show that more couples are divorced in the fifth year of their married life than at any other time should give men and women who are approaching this danger line food for thought.

It should make wives more careful of their personal appearance, more anxious to preserve in their husband's eyes the alluring illusions that surrounded them as girls, and more careful to show to their husbands the little flattering attentions that men crave, and seek outside the home when they are not to be found within.

To Escape the Danger

It should make every married man woo his wife over again, and prove to her how much better a husband's love is than a suitor's.

It should make both husbands and wives take especial care at this time to avoid the quarrels and other little brutalities of matrimony, for the real happiness of life comes when a man and woman, knowing the best and the worst of each other, make up their minds to overlook each other's faults, and magnify each other's virtues, and hand in hand and shoulder to shoulder, to live, and work, and love together until death parts them.

But before that comes the five-year danger time when the divorce courts will get you—if you don't watch out!

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

NEARLY all the youth of the neighborhood attended the charity bazaar, and one by one they drifted to a stall where a tiny, shapely, scented gray kid glove reposed on a satin cushion. Attached to the cushion was a notice, written in a delicate feminine hand, which ran:

"The owner of this glove will, at 7:30 this evening, be pleased to kiss any person who purchases a twenty-five-cent ticket beforehand."

Tickets were purchased by the score, and at 7:30 a long row of young bloods was assembled outside the stall.

Then, punctual to the moment, old Tom Porson, the local pork butcher, who weighs 225 pounds and is almost as beautiful as a side of bacon, stepped to the front of the stall.

"Now, young gents," he said in his best "Buy, buy, buy!" tones, "this 'ere glove belongs to me. I bought it this morning. Now I'm ready for you. Come on! Don't be bashful! One at a time!"

But nobody came on.

CHAPTER XXI.—(Continued.)

ALICE hesitated; then, with pleading eyes: "I've been troubled about different things lately, and I spoke to Father Anselm yesterday, and he said I might come to him to-day at a quarter to 3."

"You mean for confession?"

"Yes."

"I see. How long does it take?"

"Fifteen or twenty minutes."

"Will it make you feel happier."

"Oh, yes, much happier."

"All right," he nodded, "I'll wait.

They entered the church and Groener waited beside the confessional.

The door of the confessional box opened and a black-robed priest came out and moved solemnly away. Enfin! It was over! and, with a feeling of relief, Groener watched the priest as he disappeared in the passage leading to the sacristy.

Still Alice lingered, saying a last prayer no doubt. But the hour was advancing. Groener looked at his watch again. Twenty minutes past three! She had been in that box half an hour. It was ridiculous, unreasonable. Besides, the priest was gone, her confession was finished. She must come out.

"Alice!" he called in a low tone, standing near the penitent's curtain.

There was no answer.

Then he knocked sharply on the woodwork: "Alice, what are you doing?"

Still no answer.

The confessional box was empty. Alice was gone!

CHAPTER XXII.

At the Hairdresser's.

WHAT had happened was very simple. The confessional box from which Alice had vanished was one not in use at the moment, owing to repairs in the wall behind it. These repairs had necessitated the removal of several large stones, replaced temporarily by lengths of supporting timbers between which a person might easily pass.

Coquenil, with his habit of careful observation, had remarked this fact during his night in the church, and now he had taken advantage of it to affect Alice's escape. The girl had entered the confessional in the usual way, had remained there long enough to let Groener hear her voice and had then slipped out through the open wall into the sacristy passage beyond. And the priest was Tignol!

"I scored on him that time," chuckled Coquenil, rubbing away at the woodwork and thinking of Alice hastening to the safe place he had chosen for her.

"M. Matthieu," called Groener, "Would you mind coming here a moment?"

"I was just going to ask you to look at these carvings," replied Matthieu, coming forward innocently.

"No, no," answered the other excitedly, "a most unfortunate thing has happened. Look at that," and he opened the door of the confessional. "She has gone—run away!"

Groener then told how he believed that the priest, Father Anselm, had helped the girl escape, and he asked Coquenil to help find her. He took Coquenil to the residence of a woman whom Groener said was a sister of the priest.

"He's trying to lose us," said the old fox, hurrying up a moment later. "There are three exits here."

"Three?"

"Don't you know this place?"

"What do you mean?"

"There's a passage from the first courtyard into a second one and from that you can go out either into the Place de la Madeline or the Rue de l'Arcade. I've got a man at each exit, but"—he shook his head dubiously, "one man may not be enough."

"Tonnere de dieu, it's Mamade Cecile's!" cried Coquenil. Then he gave quick orders to guard the exits.

Meanwhile Tignol had returned with one of his men, who was straightway stationed in the courtyard.

"Now," went on Coquenil, "you and I will take the exit on the Place de Madeleine. It's four to one he comes out there."

"Why is it?" grumbled Tignol.

"Never mind why," answered the other brusquely, and he walked ahead frowning until they reached an imposing entrance with stately palms on the white stone floor and the glimpse of an imposing stairway.

"Of course, of course," muttered M. Paul. "To think that I had forgotten it! After all, one loses some of the old tricks in two years."

"Remember that blackmail case when we sneaked the Countess out by the Rue de l'Arcade. Eh, eh, er, what a close shave!"

Coquenil nodded. "Here's one of the same kind," he glanced at a sober coupe from which a lady, thickly veiled, was descending, and he followed her with a shrug as she entered the house.

Tignol handed M. Paul a copy of the telegram the wood carver had sent. It read:

"Dubois, 20 Rue Chalgrin.

"Special bivouas amateur bouillon danger must have Sahara easily Goener arm impossible. FELIX."

"I see," nodded Coquenil, "it ought to be an easy cipher. We must look up Dubois."

"Suffering gods!" muttered the detective, after an anxious wait, "he's coming!"

As he spoke the glass door at the foot of the stairs opened and a handsome couple advanced toward them, both dressed in the height of fashion, the woman young and graceful, the man a perfect type of the dashing boulevardier.

Coquenil seized the man.

"No nonsense or you'll break your arm," he warned the captive as the latter made an ineffectual effort against him. "Call the others," he ordered, and Tignol blew a shrill summons. "Rip off this glove. I want to see his hand.

"Come, come, none of that. Open it up. No? I'll make you open it. There, I thought so," as an excruciating wrench forced the stubborn fist to yield. "Now then, off with that glove. Ah!" he cried as the bare hand came to view. "I thought so. It's too bad you couldn't hide that long little finger! Tignol, quick with the handcuffs! There, I think we have you safely landed now, M. Adolf Groener!"

The prisoner had not spoken a word. Now he flashed at Coquenil a look of withering contempt that the detective long remembered and, leaning close, he whispered, "You poor, weak fool!"

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

It is generally conceded that the Boston American has a greater circulation than all the other Boston evening papers combined, and that it is as strong in Boston in the evening field as, for example, a paper of the combined strength of the Evening Journal and Evening World would be in New York city, or the Evening American and Evening News in Chicago.—Advertisers' Magazine.

Advice and Comfort for the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

RIGHT IN OBJECTING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-one years of age and am deeply in love with a girl two years my junior. I have been acquainted with her three years. It was a case of love at first sight, but I told her nothing of it until this Summer during our vacation. She then confessed that she loved me. I have no bad habits, do not drink or smoke cigarettes. I live in Boston and she in Maine. Lately she seems cool to me and writes of good times with other admirers and objects when I remonstrate with her. Recently she asked me not to remind her of our pledge, as we are too young.

G. R. H. M.

YOU are right in objecting to her action. She may, however, be writing of those things just to make you jealous.

JILTED.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl seventeen and have been keeping company with a young man two years older. He was very attentive to me until recently and I have heard that he is keeping company with other girls. As I like the young man very much, I am in doubt what to do.

M. R.

Roxbury.

YOU can do nothing but let the matter drop. He certainly isn't worth bothering with if he is so fickle.

ATTENTION NO INTENTION.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty-two, and have been keeping company with a man for nine months and knew him six months before. When I first met him he talked a little about marriage, but only a little, and he has said nothing about it since. He is twelve years older than I am. Do you think I should waste my time on him? He treats me nicely and takes me everywhere.

KATE C. M.

MY dear young woman, I am afraid you are a little bit too much of a matchmaker. It is a man's prerogative in this grand country of ours to pay attention without intention as much as he pleases, and all we women can do is to wait until the man says the word and then be willing to fall readily into his arms.

NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman of twenty-four years. For the past three months I have been passing a handsome fellow daily. He looks at me very attentively and yesterday tipped his hat. Was I wrong to speak to him? I know his name and he knows mine. A person who knows him said that he is a fine young man. This morning he stopped me and asked me if he could see me home to-night and I accepted. Was that proper? If he becomes serious in his intentions would it be nice for me to still be friendly with him? I am engaged to a good, quiet man whom I like very much, but I think that I could learn to love this new friend better. Am I fickle? Shall I break the engagement and take the risk of this new fellow liking me? I don't want to be an old maid.

JULIA F. M. F.

IT will certainly be a good thing for the man to whom you are engaged if you are an old maid. You are not loyal to him and are ready to throw him aside for this chance acquaintance, who had so little respect for you that he would accost you on the street without an introduction. He probably has no more serious intentions than the man in the moon. After you have broken with your fiance, your new admirer would undoubtedly be among the missing. Brace up, young woman, and treat the first man squarely. If you can be attracted to other men, give him up and let him have a chance to win a good woman.

HIS NEXT MOVE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady seventeen years old and love a young man two years my senior. I met him on my Summer vacation and we agreed to correspond after my return. I also promised to send him my picture. I received about six letters from him, in one of which he objected to my writing to any other fellows. I did not send letters to the other fellows, only postals. He did not answer my last letter and I wrote again asking if anything was the matter, but received no answer. Please tell me what to do. I love this young man very dearly and think it was more than a Summer flirtation. I would write again, but pride keeps me from doing so.

WINNIE.

I AM very glad that your pride is preventing you from writing again. You have made all the explanation required. Let the young man make the next move. If he never does, you are better off without him.

Prizes of $25 for Your Advice in Selecting Presents for Christmas

Well, the rush has begun. Hardly had the first editions announcing the AMERICAN'S new contest, been circulated, when answers began to pour in. It's a Christmas problem this time, and all the women in New England will be interested. Here is the proposition:

Little Bobbie's Ma wants your advice, and the BOSTON AMERICAN is going to give away $25 in three prizes of $5 each and ten prizes of $1 each to the New England women who give their best suggestions.

You all know little Bobby. He has shone conspicuously on our editorial page two or three times a week for many months.

Well, Little Bobbie's Ma, like a good many other women, doesn't know what to give the members of her family on Christmas. She intends to give some memento to her mother, her father, Little Bobbie's Pa (though he may not deserve it), Little Bobbie's big sister, and to Little Bobbie himself.

That makes five presents, and she is going to limit her expenditures to just $5.

The BOSTON AMERICAN will give $25 in prizes to the persons who will send to the AMERICAN the best lists of five suggestions for Christmas presents, one each for father, mother, husband, grown-up daughter and little son, the total cost not to exceed $5.

The prizes will be:

First prize, $5.

Second prize, $5.

Third prize, $5.

And ten $1 prizes for the next best suggestion.

In sending in your suggestions be sure you include suggestions for gifts for all five. It is not stipulated that these presents must be bought ready-made, for little Bobbie's Ma is very clever at "making things."

Send your suggestions to the Christmas Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, Boston. Write legibly on one side of the paper only, and DO NOT pin your letter sheets together.

Here are some of the first replies:

Christmas Editor:

Bobby's Ma may find some aid in these suggestions, which all come within the prescribed price:

Father—Cardigan jacket	$1.25
Mother—Cloisonne breastpin	1.25
Bobbie's Pa—Silk-lined gloves	1.15
Sister—Rafia glove basket	.65
Bobby—Magic rabbit	.70
Total	$5.00

Sister's basket cost 50c. and took one-third yard of silk to line it, cost 15c.

Bobby's rabbit needed one-quarter yard of the woollest canton flannel, 25c.; models for ears, 15c.; eyes, 20c.; cardboard supports, 10c.

MRS. JOHN L. McBRIDE.
Blue Hill Avenue.

Christmas Editor:

This is my exact list of Xmas offerings:

Father—A box of 20 new nickels	$1.00

The Yellow Circle

A THRILLING MYSTERY
By CHARLES E. WALK

Copyright, 1909, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Dorothy Day, the belle of Williamsburg, disppears in a mysterious manner from the Church of St. Stephen the Marthyr where the guests are assembled to see her become the wife of Lecomte Gibbs, the head of the steel trust.

The cause of her disappearence was a message whispered in her ear by a roughly-dressed stranger, who thrust a golden bracelet or ring into her hand when he delivered the message.

Flin, a plainclothes man from police headquarters, is detailed on the case, and after hearing the story of the disappearance from Gibbs, Miss Edith Gervaise, who was to act as the maid of honor, and Foster Cole, the best man, tells the police sergeant that Dorothy Day has skiped off with another man.

Gibbs and Cole go to the home Gibbs had prepared for his bride, and there Cole asks him questions about Dorothy, who had come to Williamsburg from California four years before. Gibbs knows little about the girl's early history, and as he has about finished telling the little he knows he sees a brass reliquary on the table in his den, where the two men are sitting, that belongs to Dorothy and which was in her hand that afternoon.

In picking up the reliquary Gibbs finds a note warning him and his friends not to try to find Dorothy, who will be returned unharmed the following Wednesday; that is if no search is made for her, but if a search is made the girl will have to answer for it.

Gibbs and Cole interview the servants in their endeavor to find how the reliquary came into the house. Cole talks to the butler alone, as he thinks that he is the shrewdest one of the servants and from his actions shows he knows how the reliquary was placed where it was.

Cole learns nothing of the matter in hand from the butler, and Gibbs only succeeds in making the servants he talks to angry.

Cullimore

ADVANCING into the room, Cole remarked:

"Well, I know as much as I did before. You only have learned something—if you could but take the message to heart: it never pays to browbeat the servants."

"To the devil with your smug philosophy!" was the angry rejoinder. But the young man ignored it.

"There's a contrivance recently invented by some college professor," said he, "that I'd like to try on Cullimore. It is a lie detector, with its aid one can plumb the bottomless pits of a chap's sub-conscious mind and fathom all the mysteries of his sumliminal ego. You set some wheels going, the chap lays his hands on a what-you-call-'em, and then you proceed to fire some words at him. It is like a game. The chap must say the first word that pops into his mind, suggested by the word you gave him; the machine measures the interval of thought, and if there is nothing to interfere with the association of ideas the chap will answer prompt the first word that your word suggests. Hesitation signifies equivocation.

The Brass Saint Disappears.

"The possibilities are obvious. If you lead him unsuspecting over a prepared course, why, pretty soon he begins to shy; the machine notes the time, and——

"Where's the little brass saint?"

Cole's tone changed so abrutly from a lazy drawl to one of eager, surprised inquiry that his inattentive hearer started from the moody reverie into which he was drifting under the soporific influence of the younger man's aimless chatter.

"There it is, confound—why, where is it?"

Astonishment overspread Gibb's face as he stared at the bric-a-brac on his desk. In another moment he cried aloud:

"Good Lord, Foster! am I going insane? I would swear the thing was—— But you know yourself it was there not over ten minutes ago. Where—how could it have gone?"

For the second time this night the two stood staring blankly at each other, for once Cole's air of ennui effectually routed.

Although they hunted high and low for it, the reliquary, together with the slip of paper and the gilt band, was not to be found.

CHAPTER VI.

Episode of the Speeding Motor Car

IF two men were ever perplexed by a sequence of incomprehensible occurrences, why, those two men were Lecomte Gibbs and his faithful Achates, Foster Cole.

Despite the former's great wealth and the fact that he was at the head of the nation's greatest industries, his life had not been particularly eventful. Williamsburg is a city of wealth, and, consequently, a certain kind of subdued splendor stamps all its different phases, the whole having been built upon a solid foundation of coal and iron. Every day in the year, without interruption, the chimneys and blast furnaces belch forth dense clouds of black, obscuring the heavens and polluting the landscape for miles around; at night their glare is lurid, never dying away. The smoke has been likened to incense, the glare to the perpetual fires on the high altar of Mammon.

Still, it was all quite commonplace to those who had been reared in the city's murky atmosphere; and Gibbs, with some scores of his kind, lived a rather humdrum existence, diversified by the customary social happenings, an occasional brief trip abroad, or, perchance, a rare day or two snatched from the dull course of business to shoot or fish on a nearby club preserve. Therefore we may the more readily sympathize with him when, without warning, he was hurled from this familiar routine into a labyrinth of mystery, where he was menaced by unknown perils on every hand. He was left helpless, stupefied; for experience offered no suggestion that might avail him.

Besides, contrary to the universal belief that marriages in his sphere are affairs of the purse rather than of the heart, no sentiment other than love, and that disposition of the mind toward the beloved which follows as a matter of course, had entered into his relations with Miss Day. And furthermore, Lecomte Gibbs was a man of fine sensibilities which were capable of adapting themselves to innumerable delicate shades of feeling, to whom the divine emotion was indeed no small matter.

All of which is set down at some length because Foster Cole was fully alive to the many complexities of his friend's suffering, and, being indeed a true friend, the least he could do was to devote his best endeavors to finding Miss Day and returning her to her distracted lover, if—the reservation must be added—the end of the search justified him in so doing.

Maybe she had been foully dealt with—God grant that she had not; but in the event that she had, somebody would be made to suffer, and he was quite willing to lend himself as an instrument of vengeance. He was able to consider the possibilities and arrive at the conclusion named with cold-blooded deliberation; therefore he became an adversary by no means to be despised.

In a Fog of Mystery

Choosing to walk through the still night from his friend's mansion to his own modest club lodgings, Cole reviewed in his mind all the circumstances. He, too, felt that he was groping in a fog of mystery impenetrable and amazing; yet he was not without hope in seeking a solution.

If Lecomte Gibbs's life had been humdrum, his own had not; it is no part of this narrative to enter into the whys and wherefores; but the thought brought to his lips a satirical little twist, a bit of sardonic humor confided to the night, which faded before the bright image of Edith Gervaise. This image, let it be confessed for him, was with him pretty constantly.

He went over again that young lady's account of what had occurred at the church, concentrating his attention upon each detail in turn.

First of all, the gilt band received by Dorothy conveyed an intelligible message to her; it had stung to life some bitter, poignant memory. This could argue only a previous acquaintance—a very unpleasant one, it might be taken for granted—with an identical or similar article. One second's hesitation, and then the potency of what the thin strip of metal stood for had outweighed every other consideration; she fled without a word—at any rate, without a word that anybody understood.

Assuredly there can be no more important crisis in a girl's life than her marriage to the man she loves. Still, Dorothy Day had been prevailed upon, in some nameless, some terrible mysterious manner, to forsake her waiting lover, the brilliantly lighted church, the assemblage of invited guests; she was stricken deaf to the notes of the wedding march, and she had vanished from off the face of the earth as completely as if she had been enveloped in the folds of an invisible mantle.

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

A MOUNTAIN COLLOQUY

"Did you husband get that terrible red nose working out in the sunshine?" asked one woman.

"No," answered the other. "That ain't sunshine. That's moonshine."

THE "LORDS'" HUMANITY

By sixty-two votes to twenty-five the House of Lords in a non-party division rejected a bill to stop the coursing of rabbits or shooting of pigeons let out of a trap or the hunting of carted deer.

MISS SCHROEDER AND FATHER, NOTED SYMPHONY CELLIST

The appearance of Miss Elfriede Schroeder as Nedda in "Pagliacci" at this week's debutante evening at the opera is awaited with the greatest interest by Boston's whole musical colony. Miss Schroeder is the daughter of Alwyn Schroeder, the famous 'cellist.

For nearly twenty years Schroeder has been a favorite with Boston music lovers. He was 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and for many years with the Kneisel Quartette. About three years ago he announced that he was going back to Germany to spend the rest of his life, and took his family across the Atlantic with him.

The Schroeder children, however, were Americans in ideas and did not like the old country. They were not happy there, and finally decided to return to Boston, which had become his home.

Now Miss Elfriede, having reached the age of twenty-two and studied voice culture faithfully for many years, is adjudged worthy of appearing with the Boston Opera Company, and her father is one of the happiest men in Boston.

Here's How to Make English Plum Pudding

CHRISTMAS is coming, and its season of good cheer and holiday making. Here are three genuine English recipes for making plum pudding from the foremost English cooking book.

CHRISTMAS PUDDING NO. I.

TWO pounds of finely chopped suet, 1¾ pounds of Demerara sugar, 1 pound of stoned, chopped raisins, 1 pound of sultanas, 1 pound of currants, 1½ pounds of chopped mixed peel, ½ pound of breadcrumbs, ½ pound of flour, ½ saltspoonful of salt, 12 eggs, ½ teaspoonful of mixed spice, ¼ pint of brandy.

Method—Have a large glazed earthenware pan and put in the dry ingredients, a little of each at a time, mix them well together, cover with a cloth, and let them stand overnight. Beat up the eggs thoroughly and mix them well with the ingredients in the pan. Finally add the brandy and give another good mixing. Put the pudding mixture into buttered tin molds, or buttered earthenware molds, tie up the puddings securely in well-floured cloths, previously washed and dipped into boiling water, and boil six hours or longer. Hang up till required for use, when it should have another two hours' boiling. The above will make from three to four puddings. Pour a little brandy, rum or kirsch round, and set it alight just as it is being sent to the dinner table.

CHRISTMAS PUDDING—NO. II

THOUGH not so rich as the above recipe, the following is excellent if carefully boiled. Take ¾ pound each of stoned raisins, currants, flour and suet, ½ pound each of breadcrumbs and treacle, 2 eggs, ¼ pound of candied peel and a teaspoonful of powdered ginger. Chop the suet finely, and carefully prepare the fruit. Warm the treacle and add a little milk to it. Mix all the ingredients carefully and boil steadily from six to eight hours.

CHRISTMAS PUDDING—NO. III

TAKE 1 pound each of suet, raisins, currants and bread crumbs, ¼ pound of orange peel, 2 ounces of sweet almonds, 9 eggs, sugar, nutmeg and brandy to your taste. Boil for four and a half hours, or, if to be steamed, cook for seven hours. This is an excellent pudding.

The Scales

By I. K. LLOYD

THEY said: "Your sins are multiple."
I sighed beneath their weight;
Then saw I that the stars were still Mysterious and great.

They said: "As water is your soul,
Shallow, a mirror cracked."
I smiled and found where oceans roll
The music life had lacked.

They said: "Naught have you wrought aright;
Earth needs not such as you."
The hilo wind drave up the night,
As if such taunt it knew!

Then said they: "His vain day is done;
Neath earth his folly trust."
Nay, then are stricken woodlands one
With my unworthy dust!

William Phillips, Reported Engaged to Ethel Roosevelt, to Wed Miss Drayton

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

An engagement shortly to be announced which will make somewhat of a stir in the exclusive set is that of William Phillips whose engagement to Ethel Roosevelt, daughter of the President, was rumored last Winter, to Miss Caroline Drayton of New York.

Miss Drayton, who is the daughter of J. Coleman Drayton, is said to be a most interesting girl, pretty and accomplished.

Mr. Phillips, who is the third son of Mrs. John C. Phillips of Boston and Washington, has been in the diplomatic service almost ever since his graduation from Harvard in 1900 and has just been transferred from assistant secretary of state in Washington to first secretary at the United States embassy in London.

On account of his social position, his wealth and brilliant prospects, Mr. Phillips has long been looked upon as quite the most desirable "catch" in Boston and buds, belles and managing mammas have plied their witcheries and wiles ever since he was a student in college.

He belongs to the Tennis and Racquet and Myopia Clubs in Boston and the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase in Washington.

Mr. Phillips's first appointment was secretary to Ambassador Choate in London and while there his mother and sisters took up their residence abroad and were among the most popular of American women at that time presented at court. Mrs. Phillips and Miss Martha Phillips resided with Mr. Phillips in Washington last Winter and had planned to go to London with him this year, but if his marriage takes place before he leaves, which is quite likely, their plans will necessarily be altered.

Dr. John C. Phillips and George Wendell Phillips are the brothers and Miss Martha Phillips and Mrs. Raynal Bolling of New York, the sisters.

Announcement has just been made of the engagement of Miss Katherine Maynard Browne, daughter of Mrs. William Maynard Browne of Peterboro street, to Eliot Daland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tucker Daland of Fisher Hill, Brookline. Miss Browne is a granddaughter of the late Causton Browne, and one of the younger members of Boston's most exclusive set.

Mr. Deland graduated from Harvard last June and is now taking a supplementary course at the Lawrence Scientific School.

First of the season's debutantes to become engaged is Miss Katherine Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Galen Stone of Brookline, whose bethrothal to Richard Farnsworth Hoyt, Harvard '10, was announced the day she was formally presented to society. Mr. Hoyt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Hoyt of Tappan street, Brookline. No date has as yet been set for the wedding.

* * *

Mrs. George von L. Meyer, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and her daughters, the Misses Julia and Alice Meyer, have arrived in Washington for the Winter. They have been spending part of the Autumn at Hamilton, Mass., and enjoyed Thanksgiving in their country home there.

Miss Helen Taft and her brother, Robert Taft, are to have an informal dance given in their honor at the White House on the evening of December 29. It will be an affair for the younger set exclusively and will be attended by the buds of the season, among them being Miss Meriam and Miss Margaret Draper.

* * *

Mrs. Harold I. Sewall (Virginia Evans), whose husband is the son of Mrs. William B. Sewall of Boston, will play one of the important parts in the new and interesting play which is to be given in Washington this season. There is a long and imposing list of patronesses, among whom are Mrs. Larz Anderson and Mrs. Clarence Moore.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ryder Bennett (Helen B. Crocker) will be at home to their friends after the first of the month at their new home at No. 71 Spring park in Jamaica Plain.

One of the functions that will draw a large number of the fashionables this afternoon is the reception which Mrs. Edward B. Kellogg is giving in honor of her son's wife, Mrs. Foster S. Kellogg, at her town house on Beacon street.

Mrs. Thomas Allen Nye (Alice Turner) announces that she will be at home informally on Tuesdays at her home on Beacon street.

Senator and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore and Miss Maude Wetmore were among the fashionables seen driving yesterday in the vicinity of Hot Springs, where they are spending part of the season.

Society begins another week of heterogeneous interests to-day and leads off with an interesting charity concert for the benefit of the Trinity Church Home for the Aged, this afternoon. The concert is given in the music room of the residence of Mrs. William Kehew on Chestnut street, and Mrs. Robert Farley Clark of Beacon stret has been disposing of the tickets.

Society is particularly interested in the program because of the part which is to be taken by Miss Virginia Wainwright, who is one of the season's debutantes and has already had one musical affair in which she was conspicuous.

Miss Wainwright plays the piano and is assisted by Miss Annie Endicott Nourse, while Miss Edith Jewett, who played with Miss Wainwright at the musicale in her honor, plays the violin.

Mrs. Nathan Matthews and Mrs. George Stoddard sing, accompanied by Miss Jessie Davis. The list of matrons who are patronesses for the affair is a long and imposing one.

The Rev. William Russell Scarrett, D. D., formerly of the Massachusetts diocese and now of Georgia, is in Boston this week visiting his daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Wales of Bay State road, whose little daughter, Nathalie, he christened yesterday at Trinity Church in Copley square.

Professor and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent of Brookline have their son, Andrew Robeson Sargent and his wife, who was Marie De Acosta of New York, with them for part of the Winter. Mrs. Sargent is planning a series of dinners to be given in her daughter-in-law's honor this season.

Mrs. Charles A. Munn, who has been having a long season at her country home in Manchester, is returning to her town house in Washington this week.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John Townsend Trowbridge of Cambridge are sailing for Europe on Wednesday and have decided to spend the Winter in Southern Europe.

Baron and Baroness Rosekranz, relatives of Count Moltke, are among the distinguished visitors at Hot Springs, Virginia, and are receiving much attention there in social circles.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Appleton are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Livingston Hoyt of Staatsburg, New York, for a few days.

OPERA STARS HEARD IN A FINE SUNDAY CONCERT

By ARTHUR de GUICHARD.

A large attendance was present at the third operatic concert of the Boston Opera company season, brought together by the excellence of the programme and of the artists who assisted.

From first to last every number was enthusiastically encored. The phrase is somewhat stereotyped, and it is quite inadequate to describe the manner in which the entire house rose at the exquisite singing of Miss Alice Nielsen, at the equally fine voice and masterly style of Mr. Baklanoff, and also at the excellent performance of the orchestra under the very able directorship of Mr. Wallace Goodrich.

It is the first time I have heard such good work from this orchestra. The shading of the nuances in the accompaniments was perfect, especially in "O du mein holder Abendstern," from Tannhaeuser.

In response to an encore for the cavatina from "Romeo et Juliette" (Gounod), Mr. Idzkowski gave "Vielle Chanson" (P. Martin).

Miss Alice Nielsen gave an admirable rendering of "Ah Fors' e lui," from "La Traviata" (Verdi). The limpid beauty of her voice and excellence of coloratura was never finer. The cadenza with its final trill and pianissimo note was perfect.

For encore Miss Nielsen sang "A toi" (Bemberg), with charming grace and earnestness. Of the group of three songs I much preferred the interpretation of "Si mes vers avaient des ailes" (R. Hahn), the exquisite delicacy inherent in this composer's writing was well rendered by Miss Nielsen.

As an encore she sang Dutch Garden (Loomis), with such excellent diction that a second encore was obligatory. "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," sung with beautiful expression, each word receiving its proper value, aroused enthusiastic applause from the audience, loth to let the artist go.

Baklanoff, the popular Russian baritone, rendered two Russian folk songs, by Rachmaninoff, in a style that was remarkable for its admirable voice control and for its beauty of changing tone-color. For encore Baklanoff sang a "Romance," by Tschaikoffsky, with warmth of voice and great intensity of expression.

The orchestral numbers received also their well merited applause and persistent encores. The "Caucasian Scene," by Ippolitoff-Ivanoff had to be repeated to satisfy the clamors of the audience.

The sextet from "Lucia" had its inevitable encore also, although I have heard it sung very much better. It was Miss Nielsen who kept the singers together fortunately.

E. R. Simmons accompanied Miss Nielsen's songs delightfully, with an accuracy of execution and a control of expression that shared honors with the singer.

The program:

Overture to Oberon Orchestra.	Weber
Aria from "La Traviata," "Ah Fors' e lui" Miss Nielsen.	Verdi
Serenade For String Orchestra.	Volkmann
INTERMISSION.
Adagio and Minuet from the Incidental music to "L'Arlesienne" Orchestra.	Bizet
Songs with pianoforte:
a. Serenade	Richard Strauss
b. Si mes vers avaient des ailes	R. Hahn
c. "Goodbye"	Tosti
Miss Nielson, accompanied by Mr. E. R. Simmons.
Caucasian Scene Orchestra.	Ippolitoff-Ivanoff
Sextette from "Lucia di Lammermoor" Miss Nielson, Mrs. Rogers, Messrs. Idzkowski, Stroesco, Picco and Perini.	Donizetti
Introduction to the third act of "Lohengrin"	Wagner.

The Story of To-night's Opera

"AIDA."

Aida	Celestina Boninsegna
Amneris	Rosa Olitzka
Una Sacerdotessa	Bettina Freeman
Radames	Florencio Constantino
Il Re	Francis Archambault
Amonasro	George Baklanoff
Ramfis	Jose Mardones
Un Messaggerio	Ernesto Giaconne

Grand Corps de Ballet.

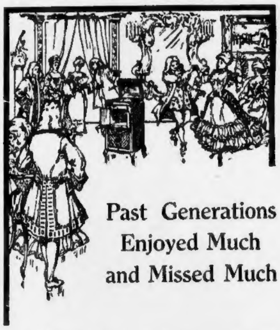
Musical Director	Arnaldo Conti
Regisseur General	Delfino Menotti

Although "Aida" has been given several times during the season of opera, this evening's performance will be notable as the first appearance of Constantino in the roles of Radames. Constantino's voice is particularly suited to this music and it is one of his favorite roles. It has been necessary to use him so much in other operas that his Radames has been delayed. Boninsegna will again sing the role of "Aida," but Rosa Olitzka will take the role of Amneris instead of Claessens and Leveroni, who have been heard in the part.

George Baklanoff, whose work as Amonasro in the earlier performances caused the critics to wax enthusiastic, and Jose Mardones, the bass, will be in the cast.

Miss Bettina Freeman was first heard in the small part of the priestess, an invisible role, because she sings off stage. She has since been heard in much more important parts and gave equal pleasure. She will sing the priestess to-night.

"Aida" is a spectacular, glowing sort of opera and with a good cast is always immensely pleasing.



In the good old days when the world was young the wonders of the Twentieth Century had not been thought of, and when we of to-day look backward we congratulate ourselves upon the wonderful development in the realm of invention, and without straining our imaginations conclude we are living in an age which affords us comfort, amusement and pleasures, with comparative ease in all walks of life.

We have, therefore, nothing to regret because we did not live in past generations when POMP and CEREMONY dominated and swayed, at the expense of the middle classes, who thus could not find opportunities for wholesale enjoyment. The most wonderful gift of wonderful minds in this age is found in the development of that most remarkable Musical Instrument

MRS. STETSON READS LESSON, DISTURBING CHURCH BY ATTITUDE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—According to inside information to-day, Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, once head of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, who was deposed from the Mother Church for alleged malpractice, is still a thorn in the side of the Mother Church.

This information follows the disclosure that Mrs. Stetson sat in her palatial home yesterday while the strains of religious music from the big pipe organ in the church next door told her that her former flock was worshipping there. Mrs. Stetson read to herself the lesson for the day, provided in the Christian Science Sentinel, official organ of the Mother Church, a copy of which had been sent her on Saturday upon its arrival here from Boston.

Whether Mrs. Stetson allowed her religious devotion to cease with the simple reading of the lesson or not is a question which the Mother Church officials would give much to know, for their interest in the doings of Mrs. Stetson is quite as keen just now as it was in the days preceding her excommunication.

Watch on Stetson House.

They have representatives here who are trying in every way to learn just what is transpiring in the Stetson home. And these representatives learned yesterday that Mrs. Stetson read the daily lesson. Beyond this they could not find out anything. Those who dwell with Mrs. Stetson have been sworn to secrecy as to what transpires within her home.

This interest by the Mother Church in the doings of Mrs. Stetson has been inspired by the uncertainty as to just what course she really intends to pursue now that she has been dropped from the membership of both the Mother Church and the First Church of Christ.

Although Mrs. Stetson has issued several statements in which she has apparently bowed completely to the will of Mrs. Eddy's directors, the officials of the Mother Church are fearful lest the former leader may change her mind and decide to start the nucleus of a new religious body which might menace the cause of Christian Science here.

With her in the house next door to the church was her sister, Mrs. Stella Stimpson, and Miss Antoinette Ensworth. Neither was at the church. But two other inmates of the Stetson house—Miss Sybil Huse and Miss Pinney, the organist, were at both services in First Church yesterday, Miss Huse teaching her class in the Sunday school and Miss Pinney performing on the organ.

Movements Kept Secret.

Miss Huse is one of those who is still under the admonition of the Mother Church, but her admonition prevents her only from practicing Christian Science. Nothing could be learned from her as to what Mrs. Stetson was doing. To all questions from members of the congregation, Miss Huse replied simply: "I do not know."

Interest in the trustees of First Church, with the exception of Mrs. Susan Thomas, has not abated in the First Church congregation, for word has gone about that the Mother Church authorities still have the conduct of some of the Trustees under investigation and there is general belief that action of some drastic kind may be taken by the Mother Church authorities for the manner in which the First Church [illegible] sought to whitewash the charges against Mrs. Stetson and to give her their open support while her methods were being attacked by Mrs. Eddy's directors.

Interest, too, is centred in Mrs. Kate Y. Remer, one of the admonished practitioners, who is known to be one of Mrs. Stetson's closest friends and advisors. It was learned that Mrs. Remer has been a frequent visitor at the Stetson home in the last few days and that she has been in daily communication with Mrs. Stetson over the telephone.

Mrs. Stetson Holds House.

It was said on high authority that the case against Mrs. Remer by the Mother Church authorities may not be entirely closed, although she has received two admonitions. The Mother Church authorities are merely waiting to see what Mrs. Remer is going to do, whether she will break away entirely from Mrs. Stetson's influence or will continue to exert her sympathies for the excommunicated leader.

Whether Mrs. Stetson will continue to live in the $300,000 house next door to the church is still another question which is causing much speculation in the First Church congregation. Many believe that such close proximity to the church of which she was once the head, will prove so obnoxious that she will dispose of her property there and move away.

The house was given to her by the congregation and the deed is in Mrs. Stetson's name. While there is a mortgage of $90,000 on the property, held by John D. Higgins and William H. Taylor, two of the trustees, the house and ground are worth far more than that.

'BRAVE DOG IN HEAVEN'; BABY IS COMFORTED

Three-year-old Arthur Croteau of Reading is being comforted to-day for the death of Rex, the pet beagle who died to save his little master, by assurance that Rex has gone to the dogs' heaven.

Arthur was dragged from the path of an automobile in Reading by the intelligent dog. The auto barely missed the baby and ran over the dog, killing him.

This occurred Saturday afternoon on Main street, near Green street, Reading. Arthur and Rex had gone out for a walk with Arthur's eleven-year-old cousin, Della Riley. After the death of Rex Della picked up the dog's body and a sad little procession returned to Arthur's mamma, Mrs. Arthur Croteau of Green street. Mr. Croteau is agent at the Edgeworth railroad station, Malden.

Mrs. Croteau said to-day:

"Rex was a year-old English beagle. We had another beagle, Trix, but Trix was poisoned about a year ago. Then we got Rex to console the baby.

"After Rex was killed Saturday Arthur cried all night. He said to me 'Mamma, will Rex go to heaven where Trix went?' I told baby that Rex had gone to the dogs' heaven because he was a good, brave doggie. That made Arthur feel a little better. But he is very lonesome for his playmate.'"

1915 SHOW BEGINS ITS LAST WEEK

The "1915 Boston" Exposition in the old Museum of Fine Arts building started to-day on the extra week which has been voted by the directors of the enterprise. One of the novelties of the program for the final week is giving the popular marionette performances in English instead of Italian. Manager Sevasta of the marionette troupe will continue the English performances to-morrow and if the change proves a hit, he will continue it throughout the week.

All the exposition exhibits are kept intact for this extra week except one. The Curtiss bi-plane had to be removed on account of previous contracts. But the two aero rooms have been combined into one with an enlarged collection of air-flight pictures. In addition, the directors announce that Charles J. Glidden, the aeronaut and aviator, will give two lectures Friday evening.

The Boston-1915 Women's Orchestra, under Edna Frances Simmons, will play afternoons and evenings as before. New programs have been arranged for the extra week.

The new motion pictures, showing a wide variety of scientific and educational subjects, will continue to form an entertaining feature of the exposition.

Four times yesterday the Museum doors had to be closed, so great was the attendance. Between 2 and 10 p. m. more than 14,000 persons were present.

FEAR ATTACK ON MANUEL

PARIS, Nov. 29.—King Manuel of Portugal is heavily guarded to-day following the shooting of General Verand on the steps of the Hotel Continental. The fact that the would-be assassin made his attack just after President Fallieres had left the building after a call on King Manuel has caused decided nervousness on the part of the government.

It was given out that Verand's assailant was an Algerian, who shot him in mistake for General Brun, Minister of War, but the well-known fact that Manuel has been marked for death by the same organization that killed his father in the streets of Lisbon has given rise to the suspicion that the shot that found Verand was intended neither for the latter nor for General Brun.

Extra precautions are also being taken to protect President Fallieres. The condition of General Verand, who was shot in the neck and forehead, is critical.

ELIOT'S "SANCTION" DERIDED BY PASTOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—"I cannot help insisting that Jesus does not stand in need of the indorsements of Dr. Eliot or his religion of the future."

The Rev. Julian K. Smyth in these words in the Church of the New Jerusalem on Thirty-fifth street summed up his criticism of "The Religion of the Future" as defined by the president emeritus of Harvard University.

"I cannot help asking was the name of Jesus mentioned as a compliment to Him or to the new religion? Why is He brought in almost as an afterthought—for in no single instance is He made the creative spirit of any one of the elements which are to charaterize the new religion?"

WOMAN CRUSHED IN MOVING ELEVATOR

Mrs. Nellie Ray, fifty-one, wife of the elevator man at the Hoffman House, No. 126 Berkeley street, while attempting to board a moving elevator in the building was caught between the floor of the "lift" and the side of the shaft.

Her screams for assistance brought to the scene one of the elevator men, who released her from her perilous position. She was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found she had sustained a compound fracture of the left leg.

STRIKE LEADER DEAD.

LAWRENCE, Nov. 29.—John Ogilvie, well known as the leader of the great Pacific Mills strike in 1882, since which time he has been refused employment in any of the local mills, is dead at his home aged sixty-seven years. He organized the first weavers' union in Lawrence.

SAYS MICROBE KILLS INFANTS

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Professor Metchnikoff, the head of the Pasteur Institute, has arrived at the conclusion that gastroenteritis in infants is chiefly due to a microbe christened the "proteus," which is found on fruits and vegetables and in butter and cheese. Mothers, he says, frequently transmit the microbes to children by handling them or their nursing bottles with soiled fingers. Soap is the remedy.

Professor Metchnikoff suggests that the hands should always be thoroughly washed before touching food intended for children; even adults who would escape enteritis should scrape cheese well and plunge fruits and salads into boiling water before eating them.

It is estimated that proteus microbes in this country cause the death of 10,000 children yearly.

BENJAMIN R. WELD, MILL HEAD, DEAD

Benjamin Rodman Weld, president of the Lyman Mills, is dead at his residence in Jamaica Plain. Mr. Weld, who was sixty-eight years old, was a director of the Webster & Atlas Bank, Suncook Mills, Pocasset Manufacturing Company, National Rockland Bank, Roxbury; Manchester Mills and of the Arkwright Mutual Fire Insurance Company, a trustee of the Institution for Savings in Roxbury, and a member of the board of city of Boston statistics trustees.

CAN JUDGE ORDER AN OPERATION?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—"Has a judge the authority to order me to have my child operated on for adenoids?" This question is asked by Louis Weller of No. 812 Tenth street northeast, who says Judge Delafry of the Juvenile Court instructed him to take his seven-year-old son to the Episcopal Hospital for surgical attention. The boy was in the Juvenile Court recently on a charge of assaulting another lad.

MINE OWNER FINDS POUND TURQUOISE

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 29.—What is believed to be the largest turquoise in the world has been found by Charles Smithson, the owner of the Crescent mine in this country.

The stone in the rough will weigh about one pound, and there is so little matrix that it is thought the gem will weigh fully three-quarters of a pound when it is cut and polished.

HERE'S CARUSO AS SKETCHED BY THE TENOR HIMSELF

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—An offensive and defensive alliance has been formed between Enrico Caruso and Leo Slazek, the first two tenors of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

"And put Riccardo Martin in, too," said the great Enrico. "He e-e-s the bod-e gua-a-rd."

It was but a few hours before the time for his performance in "La Traviata" that the tenor with the wondrous tones wandered into the business office of the Metropolitan. He was in an excess of good spirits, and, as is always the case under such circumstances, he wanted to sketch.

"What shall it be," he remarked to Whiting Allen, "a sketch or a biography?"

The appearance at that moment of Slazek at the doorway, through which he had to edge sideways, solved the question and caused the forming of an alliance which seemed to amuse Caruso.

As an evidence of the compact the good-humored singer reached for a pencil and sketched his colleagues as well as himself, and then, hopping from his chair, walked blithely out toward his hotel, whistling like a schoolboy.

PRAY AT POLLS IN LIQUOR WAR

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 29.—After a bitter campaign of three months Alabama to-day decides whether a prohibition amendment shall be written into the State constitution or not. Both sides profess to be confident of the result, but it is apparent that the antis are more confident than their opponents. Experienced politicians are predicting the defeat of the amendment by from 10,000 to 20,000 majority.

The fight has divided the State as never before, the division extending into families.

The women of the State are arrayed for the amendment, as are the preachers. Women and children are at the polls to urge men to vote for the amendment. Prayer meetings are also being held at the polling places. Whichever way the election goes it will be years before the bitterness engendered is allayed.

DOCTOR TATTOOES A HUMAN EYEBALL

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—An operation performed only a few times in the world's history, was successfully completed at the Medico-Chirurgical College of Pharmacy by Dr. L. Webster Fox. By the use of six needles, india ink and a vegetable dye the doctor succeeded in tattooing the perfect semblance of an eye on the blind eyeball of a young girl, which was covered with an ugly white blemish. The operation, Dr. Fox told his class, can never become a common one, as it is seldom that the eyeball is in condition to permit tattooing work.

ONCE A NEWSBOY, NOW $12,000 TENOR

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—William Miller, until fifteen years ago a ragged newsboy on the streets of Pittsburg, recently has signed a contract at $12,000 a season to sing the leading tenor role in the Munich Royal Opera. Miller used to lead the noisy newsboys when they joined in the chorus of the popular songs at the old Academy Theatre here. One day the sweet tones of the young leader were noticed by a local music teacher, and as a result he was sent abroad to study.

BOSTON TO HAVE NEW MEDITERRANEAN LINE

For the second time in five weeks the important announcement has been made of the establishment of a new passenger and freight service between Boston and Mediterranean ports. This time it is the Sicula-Americana Company that has decided to get part of the big business in this port.

The first steamer will be the San Giovanni, and she will sail from the National Docks, East Boston, a week from next Wednesday, direct for Messina and Palermo.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

While there is evidence of a weak technical position in the market, banking interests will not permit any demoralization of prices.

Financial interests are now turning their attention from the Sugar and Standard Oil decisions to the meeting of Congress.

As the market is purely a traders' market, stocks are a purchase when they have apparently no friends.

The annual scourge of advance rumors of the President's message is upon State street. This year the rumors deal only with ideas that the President has expressed many times, and yet State street pretends to be terrified. The Street got a creepy feeling when somebody said that J. P. Morgan was laboring with the President in the hope of getting him to modify his language.

As a matter of fact, all the things that Washington may do, or Congress may try to do, will help the stock market. In the past a few men in each corporation had complete control of the fortunes of thousands of investors. These men alone knew months in advance what prices the securities would probably sell at in the market. Armed with this knowledge, they took as many millions as they considered it safe to take from the general public.

But they took too much without really intending to do so, and the result is that they are to be deprived of their monopoly of information. All the legislation of the last few years is aimed at making public every detail of trust management.

The new laws compel disclosures of corporation details, and the newspapers by continuing disclosures of the private lives of the controlling elements in the corporations make it possible for the public to get some estimate of the value of stocks.

Investment has been made safer and speculation has not been destroyed. The handicap of the public has been lightened materially, but both the public and the insiders must still use judgment in estimating the probable consequences of conditions.

If the public becomes alarmed at the measures taken in Washington to safeguard investments, there will be such an outpouring of stocks as will lead to a belief that State street is trying to give Washington an object lesson. If the public remains calm, these State street interests will join in a constructive stock market. The safety of the present situation lies in the fact that Morgan influence is dominant and that Morgan has made his money by building up properties instead of by capturing and destroying after the Standard Oil fashion.

From day to day State street hears pleasant yarns about what individual operators are doing, but the uncertainty of the stock market is based upon deep seated causes, and not upon the personal transactions of the Hawleys, the Morgans or the Rockefellers. The copper merger is a mere fly on the ox's horn.

Reading common has been very scarce for several weeks. There is practically no floating stock. There is no short interest in Reading and the loaning demand is very light, merely to cover the exigencies of trading from day to day.

There are reasons for believing that a new move has been begun in United States Steel against the large outstanding professional shortage. There are a great many bear stops above the market for the stock, and in case it should be manipulated above 95 there would be a wild covering movement that might carry it easily across par. The so-called Morgan pool is reported handling the manipulation again.

So long as Union Pacific continues above 200 the insiders apparently are content, but when it goes below that figure they get busy and come to the rescue. There is nothing in the shape of a campaign in it on the part of the management as there was in the old Harriman days, but care is taken that it does not go down too far. Around 200 there always is some good investment buying.

Utah is a fine property in itself, and since it became known that it practically had secured control of the Boston Consolidated there has been a lot of buying. The recent dip is supposed to have been caused mainly by the selling of those who got in earlier and were taking profits, hoping to buy again at lower prices.

20 JAPS KILLED, 15 INJURED IN WRECK

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 29.—Twenty Japanese were killed and fifteen injured, several fatally, in the wreck of a work train on the Great Northern railway between Vancouver and New Westminster. The train running South to Sumas, when within a mile of New Westminster ran into a washed out culvert.

Nothing succeeds like circulation. The AMERICAN has quantity and quality.

UNCERTAINTY IN COPPER LIST

STATE STREET, Nov. 29.—The copper share market opened soft this forenoon. There was an air of uncertainty after Saturday's severe decline, and with a sharp drop in the price of copper warrants in London at the opening there was little to inspire confidence.

Lake Copper was the feature, with a sudden burst of speed which carried the price up from an opening at 52½ to 57. The short interest had been warned some time ago that it was in a dangerous position and belated bears have found that it was. In some circles belief is gaining ground that the steady advance comes from buying for control, and the natural thing is to credit Calumet & Hecla interests with being the purchasers.

North Lake had a sympathetic rise to 10 and La Salle to 17. North Butte was also very soft in the early trading, falling from 63½ to 62¾, but recovery to 63¾ followed. General belief is that this stock is continually being accumulated.

Amalgamated broke a point to 85½ on arbitrage selling, but quickly recovered to 87¼. The copper merger is said to be still on, but stocks with this affiliation continue heavy, particularly Greene-Cananea and Butte Coalition. There is no change in the Utah Copper, Boston Consolidated merger and the deal will go through from all reports. A break in common Sugar shares to 119¾ attracted a large amount of attention.

ANACONDA IS OFF 2 POINTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Liquidation of the copper shares continued in Wall street to-day, resulting in the decline of 2 points in Anaconda, 1½ points in Amalgamated and ⅝ of a point in Smelters. Railroad shares were also fractionally lower, but shortly after the opening showed an inclination to break away from the copper stocks and they recovered all of their losses.

Rumors were still heard in the street that the copper merger would be postponed, although persons interested in the combination say everything is progressing smoothly.

SEES GREAT WAR SHADOW ON EUROPE

By CHARLES P. NORCROSS.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The stage is being set in the Old World for a great drama.

Within every cabinet in Europe, behind closely guarded doors, around great tables, grave and thoughtful men are peering anxiously into a portentous future. The tension is felt acutely in Downing street and the foreign office, and it is reflected in the brooding eyes of Pichon, the great Foreign Minister of France. With phlegmatic calm, Von Betaman Holweg, the grim chancellor of Germany's war lord, studies the statistics of the superb army, the impregnable fortresses and the huge fighting craft that fly the flag of the Fatherland.

Down in the dual empire of Austria-Hungary an old man, whom the Winter of life has grasped with its icy chill, is tottering to the grave. At his elbow stands a figure—sinister, saturnine, scheming—waiting for the not far distant moment when he can grasp the reins of government. In the New Turkey a government, as yet untried, is being carefully studied by all for the part it may have to take.

Fear Storm Break.

Across in Italy is a King, nominally bound by the Triple Alliance. In faraway Russia a sore-beset Czar, struggling with a heterogeneous population, torn by internal disorders, keenly sensitive of the falling political barometer, is trying to reform his lines and buttresses of his country for the part it must take when the storm breaks.

This is the situation: yet you do not see it openly discussed in the newspapers, and you rarely hear it discussed in public. It is a subject tabooed, yet it is in every man's mind. When the great leaders of England meet in Downing street, or behind the closed doors of the great houses, it is the subject that is discussed almost to the exclusion of everything else. Once in a while you find some statesman who hints at it—the terror that shadows all Europe.

Perhaps the best expression of the situation was that made by Lord Rosebery, the brilliant, the unstable, but the lovable ex-Prime Minister. He referred to it as the "ominous hush" that broods over Europe.

Two Great Rivals.

When you talk confidentially with the men who are most familiar with the intricate moves of the various governments you will be astonished at the frank manner in which they discuss the inevitable eventuality of a great war—a war that in its ultimate ramifications will take in England and all continental Europe.

Germany and England.

These are the great signatory powers to the decree of unrest. They are each other awaiting the inevitable, the final war for dominance. Europe is not big enough for two. One must go. Germany has made her bid for dominance. England cannot acquiesce.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

LABOR

The wage scale agreed upon between the management of the new Boston Opera House and the Theatrical Employes' Union to-day was announced. The men of the regular day and night gangs will be paid $25 a week. The day gang will work from 9 to 5 each day, with an hour for dinner. The night gang will work from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m., with one hour for dinner after the show. Overtime will be paid for at the rate of 60 cents an hour, 50 cents an hour for rehearsals overtime and time and a half for Sunday work. All but heads of departments must be members of the union.

Claiming that the management of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has not given satisfactory assurances that its wages will be advanced as much as they should be, Freight Handlers' Assembly No. 62 has instructed its conference committee to request another meeting with the officials of the road to have their grievances adjusted. The men contend that they are unable to live on the wages now paid, $2 a day.

Tendered a unanimous renomination as secretary-treasurer of Coal Teamsters' Union No. 68, M. J. Sheehan, who has held the office for seven consecutive years, has declined a re-election. John J. Fenton, to-day serving the organization as business agent, has been given the nomination, while E. J. Looney and J. F. Connors are the nominees for the position made vacant by his promotion. President James J. Curtin and Fred Carroll are the nominees for the presidency, while Vice-President Thomas McCauley and Recording Secretary D. B. Proctor are the unanimous choice of the union for re-election.

In a report on the trade unions of the State just issued by the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics, the total number of registered unionists in the Commonwealth is set at 170,000, with 1,172 local unions reported on and eighty-four not enumerated in the list. This, it is thought, is within 5,000 of the full quota of organized labor's full strength in the State as a whole. In 1940 there were 1,420 local unions, in 1905, 1,298; in 1906, 1,340; in 1907, 1,369, and in 1908, 1,334. In the period of industrial depression beginning in the latter part of 1907 a large number of unions either disbanded or amalgamated with other local organizations in the same locality, and comparatively few unions were organized in that period.

Typographical Union No. 13 of this city has voted to co-operate with the School Commissioners to make a success of the evening school classes in printing. The meeting to consider the subject as presented by Master Leavitt, representing the School Board, reported in favor of a general plan, as the result of their investigation. Under the plan all ambitious youths will get a proper instruction in the first principles.

Boston & Maine Freight Handlers' Assembly No. 5572 to-day is almost $1,000 richer by reason of its Thanksgiving eve ball, and wishes to thank the business men of Greater Boston for their generous support that made this result possible. The money will be added to the sick and disability fund of the organization.

Bartenders' Union No. 77 has unanimously renominated its entire board of officers to serve during the ensuing term, from President Richard W. Garrity down. One hundred firms has signified their willingness to sign the new wage scale of the union, which provides for a slight increase in wages and a reduction in the length of the work day.

Horses and Carriages.

HORSE WEIGHS 1250 LBS.
BAY HORSE, WAGON AND HARNESS FOR SALE AT $110.

HORSE weighs about 1,250 lbs. or more, is very chunky built, is fat as can be and very nice gaited; has long tail and mane, his name is Ned and if you call him will follow, he can pull 2 tons in any spot or mud hole and is as light as a feather on his feet and needs no whipping; he is only 9 years old this month and has as good a set of limbs as any horse could have, and I will also give the harness and collar he worked in and his blanket, halter and a shifting floor for his stall that I built for him; now as I am about giving up my business I wish some man or lady that wants a good farm horse or grocery horse or express horse, will be just what they want and I will allow a trial of 10 days to find out that he is just as represented; now if you should want to put Ned in a plow or a tipcart or drive to church Sunday he will be just what you want; I trust some one on a farm will get him; I paid $200 for him one year ago, but as I want to sell I will sell Ned, the wagon, harness and rest for $110, or will sell separate. Can be seen at stable 1233 Columbus av., Roxbury Crossing, Boston, Mass.; ask any car conductor, he will direct you; very easy to find, just ask for Roxbury Crossing. P. S. Will sell horse separate.

Work for Which No Money Can Pay

The Scientist Who Fights Disease Does Not Ask or Expect as Great a Reward as the Inventor

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Three governments are competing to reward the Wright brothers for their years of work in making flight possible for human beings.

The governments are not interested in the possible commercial value of aeroplanes. But because the machines promise to afford a deadly means of offence in time of war the nations that know the value of fighting ability are eager to own and experiment with them.

No one will deny that the Wrights are entitled to all the money they have made, or can make out of their inventions. In the face of discouragement they have worked hard and long, and have done a geat service to humanity.

If in one battle an aeroplane shall be instrumental in winning a victory, all the money that has been paid to the inventors will be well spent.

The inventor of the aeroplane, like the inventor of the new high explosives, works for peace, because he hastens the day when war will be too terrible for human beings to engage in.

Incidentally, his invention will come into use at a time when the whole country is threatened, and its success, like the success of such a commander as Washington or Wellington, will mean, perhaps, the preservation of a nation.

But if the inventor of a means of DESTROYING human life is richly rewarded, should not the man who SAVES human life be rewarded still more substantially?

Ought not, for example, the doctor who discovers antitoxin and saves thousands of lives from diphtheria be made richer than the discoverer of melinite, the most terrible of explosives?

The common sense answer is that he ought. But with that answer no great scientist will agree.

This attitude is easily explained. The scientist who works to combat disease, to better the condition of humanity or to advance civilization feels that there can be no money reward which will adequately repay his labors.

Ask the director of any of the great institutes for the study of disease what is his ambition, and he will tell you that it is to succeed in his work—NOT to pile up a fortune.

All he asks is enough money to continue his experiments, to follow up the lines he is pursuing. Give him a million dollars for himself, and he will build another laboratory with it.

Give him an income which another man would employ to bring luxury and ease, and he will still spend twelve or fifteen hours a day with his microscope and serums, working with incredible patience to rob the world of disease of one more of its terrors.

If any of the eminent physicians who have given their lives to humanity—like Pasteur, for instance—had chosen to do so, they could have become immensely wealthy.

The discoverer of vaccine virus, had he kept his secret to himself and doled it out for money to physicians fighting with the small pox scourge, could have died many times a millionaire.

But, happily for the rest of mankind, there has never been a monopoly on scientific well doing.

The minute a discovery of immense value to medicine is made it is communicated to all the colleges and societies of physicians, and through them disseminated to all the world.

Within comparatively recent times the death rate from diphtheria has been reduced to ten per cent.; a method has been found to save the lives of thousands who might otherwise have died from consumption, and antiseptic surgery has prevented countless deaths.

To-day, through Mr. Rockefeller's gift, the scourge of hookworm promises to be ended, and a large number of people rescued from lives of anemia and uselessness.

Such services as these no money could reward. The inventors of devices that add to comfort and luxury can and do patent their inventions, and no one disputes that they are entitled to all they get out of them.

But to patent the treatment for consumption, or the use of ether in operations, or the scores of other means of helping the sick and unfortunate would be a crime against the whole race.

And, fortunately, the hard-thinking, hard-working scientists whose lives are devoted to such works would refuse to take any large money rewards for their labors if, by so doing, their discoveries were placed beyond the reach of all who might be benefited by them.

Falling Wages in Great Britain

Our consul-general at London, Mr. Griffeths, reports that there is a tendency in Great Britain toward a general decline in wages.

His figures show, in particular, for the latter part of last year and the beginning of this, that more than half a million workers lost ground, while something more than a hundred thousand had their pay increased.

The fact that half of those who have made a gain in wages are public employes, in the service of the general government or the municipalities, should have an important bearing on the question of public ownership.

Public ownership of street railways in Great Britain has increased the pay of those employed in that service about forty per cent. per working hour.

The consul-general says in his report that the British government has under consideration a bill which would give to the Board of Trade power to establish a minimum rate of wages in certain employments.

The introduction into English law of the principle of the minimum wage is perhaps a more far-reaching and revolutionary proposition than anything contained in the much-debated budget.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN is Boston's greatest newspaper. Something in it for everybody. More features and news than in any other newspaper. Circulation growing all the time.

Diary of a Suffragette

By WEX JONES

NEVER knew before how absolutely downtrodden I am. Read an article by Mrs. Chapman Kitten in the Morning Miaou showing how woman has no rights whatever. Told Jack at breakfast that it was a shame for me to be such a slave.

Jack said, "My dear, you're not a slave."

I said, "You know I am a slave."

Jack—Nonsense.

Me (or should it be I)—I am; I insist on being a slave.

Him (or He)—Very well. If you insist, by all means be one.

Me again—There! You admit that I'm a slave!

Then Jack had to go to the office.

Mrs. Kitten called in the afternoon. "How do you feel," she asked, "toward the Cause?"

I was too absorbed in looking at her new furs to answer, so she repeated:

"How do you feel with regard to the Cause?"

"What Cause?" said I.

"My dear child," said she, "is it possible that you, a member of our sex, asks what is The Cause?"

"Oh, said I, "you mean suffrage. I demand it instantly. Why, Jack called me a slave this morning."

"Oh, to be thus insulted. But, then, it's true; we are slaves."

"Isn't it awful to be in such bondage!"

When Jack came home I was crying.

"What's the matter, little one?" he asked.

"Don't call me 'little one,'" I cried. "I'm most as big as you are."

"Well, what the trouble, anyway?" he asked.

"I don't want to remain in bondage," I replied.

"Why don't you put on your kimono, then?" said he.

"What do you want, anyway?" Jack asked.

"I w-want to v-vote," said I.

"What for?" he asked.

"I don't know, b-but I want to v-vote."

"Darling," said Jack, "you can vote your head off so far as I'm concerned, but I can't give you the franchise."

And that's the way all the men are. If their wives want the vote let 'em have it, but they won't go together and do anything about it.

Popular Songs

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

If there's anything I hate, I hate a wish bone!

I.

IN a sweet New Hampshire village, in a cottage quite Queen Anne,
A wife sat down to dinner one fine day.
The day it was Thanksgiving, from the turk the gravy ran,
And everything seemed happy, bright and gay.
But when her husband helped her to the turkey and the sauce,
And held the wishbone high into the air,
She turned as pale as wax, her eyes gleamed like an axe,
And she then this declaration did declare:

CHORUS:

"If there's anything I hate, I hate a wishbone;
'Twas on a wishbone that I wished for you!
I hope I choke to death upon a fishbone
If on a wishbone now I wish anew.
I left a lovely home in old Wisconsin
To wed a man who proved a lazy dunce;
"If there's anything I hate, I hate a wishbone—
I wished for you upon a wishbone once!

II.

Because he was a very bashful cuss;
Then he swallowed that there wishbone when them bitter words she said,
And it got stuck in his aesophagus.
All efforts failed to save him, though the best physicians in all the countryside were summoned to his bedside with all possible dispatch.
He died in awful agony that day.
No wonder that his wife took on, no wonder that she cried—
She killed him with them words which she did say:

CHORUS:

"If there's anything I hate, I hate a wishbone;
'Twas on a wishbone that I wished for you!
I hope I choke to death upon a fishbone
If on a wishbone now I wish anew.
I left a lovely home in old Wisconsin
To wed a man who proved a lazy dunce;
"If there's anything I hate, I hate a wishbone—
I wished for you upon a wishbone once!

USE BUNK'S PILLS
HAVEN'T SOLD A THING ALL DAY!
SOUVENIRS TAKE ONE
ISN'T IT TOUGH WHEN NOBODY COMES NEAR YOUR STORE ALL DAY
GIMME A STAMP!
EXCEPT A MAN WHO BUYS A TWO-CENT STAMP HAVEN'T YOU ANYTHING SMALLER?
$10
AND HE MAKES YOU CHANGE A TEN DOLLAR BILL
AND NOT ONLY THAT, BUT—WHERE'S MINE?
GUS MAGER
HE EXPECTS YOU TO GIVE HIM A SOUVENIR!

JOHN, COUNT VON NOODLES IS PAYING PEGGY A VISIT TO-NIGHT AND YOU WILL OBLIGE ME VERY MUCH BY SPENDING THE EVENING AT YOUR CLUB. YOU SHOW SUCH A PREDILECTION FOR PUTTING YOUR FOOT IN IT ON EVERY OCCASION, IT ISN'T ADVISABLE TO HAVE YOU AROUND.
PREDILECKSHUN! WHAT'S THAT? GOSHAMIGHTY MAGGIE, BUT YOU DO GET OFF TH' BIG WORDS.
HELLO WIGGY - WHY SO SAD. WIFEY BEEN PUTTING ONE OVER ON YOU AGAIN?
NA-A-AW!
YES, THAT VON NOODLES IS A BOGUS COUNT. IT TURNS OUT HE'S NOTHING BUT A FLIMFLAMMER AND A CARD SHARP. HE'S WORKING THE SOCIETY GAME NOW I BELIEVE.
B'GUM - VON NOODLES - THAT NAME SOUNDS FAMILIAR. WONDER IF IT WAS TH' SAME GUY WHAT PLAYED A SHELL GAME ON ME LAST YEAR AT TH' COUNTY FAIR.
IS NOODLES IN THERE? IT'S HIM I'M AFTER.
HEY YOU NOODLES - SEE TH' DOOR? GIT! I KNOW YOUR PHIZ! THIS HOUSE AINT OPEN FOR FLIMFLAMMERS AN' CARD SHARPS SUCH AS YOU BE. BEAT IT! QUICK TOO!
POPPER!
JOHN-JOHN! HOW DARE YOU!
"COUNT VON NOODLES"! SAY MAGGIE, IF THAT'S TH' BEST YOU CAN DO, YOU'D BETTER QUIT SPLASHIN' 'ROUND IN S'CIETY BEFORE YOU MAKE A FOOL OF YOURSELF. INTERDOOCIN' HIM TO PEGGY TOO. YOU OUGHT TO BE 'SHAMED OF YOURSELF. I MAY BE ALWAYS PUTTIN' MY FOOT IN IT, BUT I GUESS TH' SHOE FITS SOMEBODY ELSES THIS TRIP.
CAN IT BE POSSIBLE?
